Compromise Bill On Foreign Aid to Face New Attack

House Fund Group Head Calls It 'Too High and Unrealistic'

Washington — (AP) — A compromise $3,556,200,000 foreign aid authorization bill drew a verbal brickbat today from the man who will have a lot to say about how much money is provided to make it work.

Only $353,200,000 short of the $3,909,400,000 requested by President Eisenhower, the bill was hammered out yesterday by senate-house conferees and will be considered by the house next Wednesday.

Separate Fund Bill
The measure merely provides authority for continuation of the program to help friendly nations stem the tide of communism through economic and military buildup.

A separate bill putting up the cash must be acted on later.

Rep. Otto E. Passman (D-La), chairman of a house appropriations subcommittee, which will draft the financing measure, took a dim view of the authorization bill. He called it "entirely too high and unrealistic" and said that "as usual it is in keeping with the wishful thinking of the president."

Passman wouldn't say how much he believed the appropriations should be cut, but house leaders have tossed around the figure of half a billion dollars or more. The foreign-aid bill offers them their biggest opportunity to make a sizeable cut in the president's over-all appropriation requests for 1960.

Passman also looked with disfavor on a provision of the compromise measure shifting military aid next year to the regular defense department budget for a 2-year trial period. The obvious effect of that provision would be to remove jurisdiction over foreign-aid defense appropriations from Passman's subcommittee.

Passman predicted that Chairman Clarence Cannon (D-Mo) of the full committee would sidestep that provision.

Cannon has power to delegate almost any subject he desires to any of his many subcommittees.

Meyer, Washington Publisher, Dies of Cancer, Heart Disease

Washington — (AP) — Eugene Meyer, who took over a bankrupt newspaper and built it into one of the nation's finest, is dead at 83.

Meyer bought the Washington Post for $825,000 in 1933 at a time when many men would be thinking of retiring.

At 57, he had behind him a successful career as a banker and long service in important government posts under every president since Woodrow Wilson.

The Post was in receivership. It was the depth of the depression. Circulation was down to 50,000.

Meyer was a Republican, but he announced in a front-page statement that the Post would be fair and unbiased in its news columns and that its editorial page would be strictly independent.

Former Cuban Air Chief Sees Reds in Control

Predicts Added Pressure Against Anti-Communists

Milwaukee — (AP) — The former chief of the Cuban revolutionary air force said today the resignation of President Manuel Urrutia of Cuba "means that communism will have complete control of the country."

Maj. Pedro Luis Diaz Lang said "this is exactly what I thought would happen."

Diaz is a guest of Bob Sigrist, news commentator in Milwaukee.

The former air force chief declared the resignation of the president was a planned move by Fidel Castro and that "it will lead to a stepped-up fight in Cuba by Castro and his supporters against anti-communists."

"Castro now has power," Diaz said, "and he can put into effect a law that recently was enacted that gives him broad power to act against what he terms counter-revolutionary activities. Actually it lets him act against anti-communists."

No Free Thought
"More people will be required to resign. The political police will be very busy."

"He can use the law to act against anyone who disagrees with him—claiming he is a traitor. There will be no free thought in Cuba. Anyone who opposes Castro, he will call a counter-revolutionary and act against him."

"Castro obtained what he wanted now. But after a little while I believe it will work against him among the people of Cuba."

Diaz, who has been in seclusion in the home of Sigrist since Tuesday, called a news conference last night in which he said that Castro's resignation as prime minister was a maneuver designed to oust Urrutia. This was before Urrutia resigned.

Diaz added that it was a move by Castro to win popular support and to try to make the people ask him to stay in power.

President Resigns After Bitter Attack; Successor Wants Premier to Remain

BY ROBERT BERRELLEZ

Havana — (AP) — Fidel Castro today forced out President Manuel Urrutia and touched off a mounting clamor to withdraw his own resignation as prime minister.

The 32-year-old Castro began his campaign yesterday to get rid of the man he personally chose as chief of state by announcing his own resignation.

Osvaldo Dorticos, who was elected Cuba's new president, made a public appeal to Castro to stay in the government.

The cabinet pledged support to him and refused to accept his resignation.

Castro emerged triumphant in a dramatic show of strength that proved him Cuba's undisputed strongman and whether he remains as prime minister was clearly his own choice.

After a 4-hour television speech accusing Urrutia of undermining the revolutionary regime, Castro was asked by American correspondents whether he would withdraw his resignation.

"I have not given that a thought at this moment," he replied.

Revolution, organ of Castro's 26th of July movement, said that public pressure for Castro to stay as prime minister was so heavy that it is certain the president will make a new appeal for him to remain in the government.

Fight Over Reds
The undercover feud between the prime minister and Urrutia, Castro's hand-picked president, came to head in a fight over communism.

Feeling ran high against the deposed president and he appealed to Raul Castro, commander in chief of the armed forces, for protection.

Urrutia remained in the presidential palace for more than three hours after resigning and then slipped out by using a ruse to throw off the angry crowd waiting outside.

While two cars sped out of opposite palace gates to draw away the crowd Urrutia and his family slipped into a limousine and raced through the main entrance. With him were his wife and three children, including 1-year-old Libertad (Liberty) who is Castro's goddaughter.

Shouting that he is no communist, Castro told a TV audience that Urrutia tried to betray the revolutionary regime by posing as "the champion of anti-communism."

His voice quivering, Castro said: "I have often said I am not a communist and neither is the revolutionary movement communist, but we do not have to say we are anti-communists just to fawn on foreign powers."

Urrutia quit while watching Castro denounce him before a nationwide audience after dramatically announcing his own resignation as prime minister to force a showdown.

Whether Castro would stick by his decision to give up the premiership was not clear.

The cabinet immediately elected Osvaldo Dorticos as president. He is a bookish-looking lawyer in his early 40s. The cabinet then asked Castro to withdraw his resignation as premier. Dorticos in a short acceptance speech appealed to the Cuban people to continue their "clamor" for the return of Castro.

Dorticos is a political unknown in Cuba. He was brought into the government as minister of revolutionary laws in a cabinet shakeup last month. In a speech last February he came out against legalizing the communist party.

Pen-Pal Romance
Edmiston addressed another envelope yesterday and sent it to Elfriede Prussing of Hamburg, Germany.

He said he received the girl's name from a pen-pal list in 1943 while he was a student in Austin, Texas, High school.

After four years of corresponding, the couple met when the army sent Edmiston to Germany in 1952. Edmiston said, "Things just worked out."

Miss Prussing made plans to come to the United States in August. Edmiston was to meet her in New York.

"I paid $50 down on her ticket, and the people said the rest must be paid by the 20th (Monday)," Edmiston said. "Because of goofy me, it's going to be pretty close."

The letter mailed yesterday was sent air mail, special delivery.

Elm Tree Bakery Plans Expansion

$300,000 Addition, $250,000 Equipment; $1.3 Million Value

A $550,000 expansion program at Elm Tree Bakery now goes to Milwaukee and Madison, north to Wausau and Sturgeon Bay, and all points in between. The company is the largest variety baker north of Chicago.

The two 30,000-pound shortening tanks will be installed on the west side of the present building, eliminating need for shortening barrels inside the plant. Other new facilities include enlarged ovens.

The firm will not expand its product line, producing about 240 different products weekly — and averaging about 175 each day.

Dimensions of the new addition will be installed later. It probably will comprise a huge flour storage bin with a blow-flower system to blow flour into the plant. Other new facilities include enlarged ovens.

Strike Affects Defense Work

Snarls Plans for 3 Atlas Missile Launching Sites

Pittsburgh — (AP) — The 4-day-old steel strike, currently pinching the nation's economy, is beginning to put a dent in national defense work.

The strike has already snarled plans for the completion of three Atlas missile launching sites near Cheyenne, Wyo., according to construction officials.

Losses Growing

The first site, scheduled for completion on Sept. 20, will be finished in time. But high pressure tanks for the other sites are not expected to be delivered in time for the November completion date because of the strike, the officials said.

As for the economic situation, the nation's steel production losses continue to mount. Production losses are estimated at $300 million a week. Wage losses are running close to $70 million a week.

President Eisenhower and James P. Mitchell, secretary of labor, conferred on the situation in Washington yesterday. Details of the conference were not released.

Deserter in 1917 Won't Serve Time

Oakland, Calif. — (AP) — The navy says Lewis E. Clayburg, a deserter for 42 years, won't have to serve time in the brig.

The 72-year-old carpenter walked into a recruiting office this week and turned himself in.

Clayburg said that after using an alias, "James Burke," since 1917, he wants to collect social security under his own name.

"Since the statute of limitations has run out, he'll get a discharge," said Cmdr. Francis T. Nash, Twelfth Naval district discipline director, "but it won't be an honorable one."

TV Stars Shine As Fair Closes

The Outagamie county fair at Seymour comes to a close with activities Sunday. The afternoon schedule includes a band concert at 12:30, livestock parade at 1 p.m. and harness races and vaudeville acts beginning at 1:30.

A band concert at 7 p.m. will open the evening program. The final performance of "Music Under the Stars" with Snooky Lanson, the Harmonicats, Manhattan Rockets and vaudeville acts will begin at 8 p.m.

The Red Foley show, which opened the fair Wednesday, played to three full grandstands—one for each show—or a total of 10,800 persons. There is no accurate gate attendance figure, but fair officials say that despite Friday afternoon's rain, a new record is in sight.

Golf Pro Slain

Waitress Confesses Shooting Man to Death

Canton, N.Y. — (AP) — "He didn't want me around anymore," a waitress told police who said last night she had confessed the murder of a handsome golf pro and college coach.

State police said Theresa DeFrancesco, 23 of Rochester, had signed a statement that she shot Richard Smith, 27, early yesterday morning as they drove across the St. Lawrence university campus.

He was golf coach for the northern New York university and pro at a nearby country club. She is a waitress with a record of shoplifting.

It was not clear how they met but police believe they became acquainted in Miami last winter. Smith returned north. "I sent him money from time to time," Miss DeFrancesco said but refused to estimate how much.

Early yesterday morning, she went to the golf course clubhouse, where Smith lived. She waited for him to return from a date. He appeared at 2 a.m.

Describes Shooting
They talked for some time and also argued but he agreed to drive her back to her hotel. The argument continued during the drive down a campus road.

Police said the girl had described events this way: "I told him I was going to jump out." He answered, "Get out."

She took a .22 calibre revolver from her purse and fired. The bullet struck him in the arm.

He said "Oh" and slammed on the brakes. The car skidded to a halt. She fired twice more and fled. Smith was lying on the front seat of his car.

Miss DeFrancesco had been seen in Canton with Smith early Thursday evening. When his body was discovered, police sent out an alarm for her.

68 Trampled to Death During Korean Stampede

Pusan, South Korea — (AP) — A stampede set off by a sudden deluge broke up an outdoor music and comedy show last night, leaving 68 persons trampled to death; by police count.

Authorities said 56 of the dead were, by unofficial identification, under the age of 20. An earlier announcement said 51 of the dead were under the age of 10. In addition, 98 persons were injured. 21 of them seriously. The jam came at the narrow gates of Pusan municipal stadium as 70,000 persons surged toward shelter.

The sudden downpour was blamed on Typhoon Billie, the fringe of which hit Korea after taking at least 67 lives in its passage across the Philippines, Formosa and Japan.

Senators Burst Into Emotional Oration Over Menominee Bill

Exuberance Fairly Assures Assembly Okay of New County

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison — State senators Friday approved a separate county for the Menominee Indians without a dissenting vote and to the accompaniment of emotional oratory of a kind infrequently heard in legislative chambers.

Their exuberant votes made it reasonably certain the assembly will concur early next week. Gov. Nelson is committed to signing the legislation.

Sen. W. F. Trinke, Lake Geneva, chairman of a committee which steered the bills after amending them heavily, remarked repeatedly that it was a "significant historical occasion."

Who would have imagined, marveled Sen. Casimir Kendzior, Milwaukee, that a Polish immigrant such as himself would be called upon to vote for the "freedom" of the Menominees, descendants of the original inhabitants of the country.

Traces of Resentment

Lt. Gov. Phil Leo Nash, an anthropologist by academic training, said the state government is substituting "liberation" for the "abandonment" of the national government.

There were traces in other speeches of resentment about the national government's decision to give up responsibility for the welfare of the Menominees.

Sen. Reuben LaFave, Oconto, bitterly charged that the national government has neglected the Indians. Their roads, schools and other public services are inferior to those in neighboring communities, a fact which he said will mean enormous capital expenditures for public services. LaFave suggested Washington be billed for some of the costs.

Trinke Amendment

Trinke had been subject of some resentment by the Indians for his insistence upon amendments that he said were necessary to prevent exploitation of the tribe's wealth.

Federal officials had consented to some of the restrictions reluctantly, apparently feeling that they would have the effect of diluting the meaning of the Indians' freedom from governmental controls.

The major Trinke amendment will make it impossible for the Menominee business organization, as a corporation, or individual Indians as shareholders, to sell their interests without the explicit consent of the state. The corporation also will be unable to encumber its assets without state approval.

The restrictions have some importance because the economic plan for the Indians contemplates an expansion of logging and milling operations, and development of local recreational facilities for a tourist industry, ventures which will require capital investment.

Shawano Schools

The new county, the state's 72nd, will consist exclusively of tribal lands in Shawano and Oconto counties.

First county elections will be supervised by the state attorney general. Federal controls cease at the end of 1960, if the department of interior approves the Indians' plan.

The new county will contract for some governmental services, such as courts, with Shawano county. Children will be enrolled in Shawano schools.

There also are provisions for a special tax rate on the tribe's forest lands. It is hoped the special rate will assure the possibility of sustained yield harvesting.

Mental Health Bills Passed

Authorize Building Treatment Center; Sent to Governor

Madison — A package of mental health bills—including one which would authorize construction of a new $500,000 institution—was passed by the Wisconsin assembly Friday.

The new institution would be a treatment center for emotionally disturbed children, to be built in Madison. Its capacity would be about 30 children.

The assembly accepted two senate amendments to the treatment center measure, clearing the way for sending the entire package to Gov. Gaylord Nelson's desk. The governor has supported the entire package, drafted by an interim committee headed by Sen. Kirby Hendee (R-Milwaukee).

Little Opposition

There were only a few scattered votes cast against the proposals.

The other bills, which also have cleared the senate, would set up a state mental health advisory committee and provide $400,000 in aid during the biennium for encouragement of local community mental health clinic development.

The treatment center bill was amended by the senate to delete any direct appropriation, meaning it must be financed from building funds under control of the state building commission. The bill, as originally drawn, would have made the money available immediately.

Old Warships Face Trip To Junkyard

Baltimore — The scrapers' torch is going to deal the battleships California and Maryland the death blow the Japanese never could.

On Dec. 7, 1941, the two battleships were hit by Japanese bombers at Pearl Harbor. The California was sunk, the Maryland disabled.

Twenty-three days after the attack, the Maryland was at Bremerton, Wash., for repairs. It took longer to refloat the California and move it to Bremerton to be rebuilt.

But in 1942, both ships were back in action. "The Fighting Mary" helped repel the Japanese at Midway, turning point of the war while the California's 14-inch guns blazed away off New Guinea, the Marianas, northern Luzon, Okinawa and Bataan.

In two or three weeks the Maryland will be towed to Oakland, Calif., to be reduced to scrap.

The California? It arrived in Maryland yesterday to be cut up by Bethlehem Steel company.

Sheriff Forced to Fire Cop Who Will Marry Showgirl

Las Vegas, Nev. — A sheriff who fired his No. 3 man because he plans to wed a well-to-do showgirl says he, too, would have put the girl ahead of the job.

Sheriff W. E. (Butch) Leopoldt gave the ax to Detective Chief William O'Reilly Thursday. O'Reilly plans to marry 27-year-old Jackie Winter, former New York model and television actress, Aug. 2.

The sheriff's grounds: the marriage would impair the department's morale.

Marrying Wealth

"I don't want any captain of mine coming to work in a Cadillac and living in a $50,000 house," Leopoldt said.

He gave O'Reilly a choice: resign or be fired.

"You'll have to fire me," the 45-year-old veteran of eight years on the force replied.

The sheriff said "it is the policy of police departments everywhere to terminate officers who marry wealth."

He added: "If I was in the same position of really loving the girl and wanting to marry

Cap. William O'Reilly, 45, tries to figure out today why he lost his job as a Las Vegas, Nev., detective as his beautiful and wealthy girl friend, Jackie Winter, wipes away a few tears. O'Reilly was fired after it was found that he and Miss Winter will be married Aug. 2. The Las Vegas sheriff said it is "police policy everywhere to fire officers who marry wealth."

These Days

Russian Way of Life Approaches American, Despite Red Statement

BY GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

New York — The essence of Frol Kozlov's statement after his visit to the United States was this:

"We are convinced that victory in this competition (capitalism vs. socialism) will be with us, and we are doing our utmost to attain such a development of productive forces in our country as would allow us in the shortest possible time to catch up with the U.S.A., not only in the total volume of production but also in per capita production."

This statement means much. Marxists have always held that it was inevitable that the Marxist concept of sociology and economics would ultimately succeed. To them that represents a scientific view of history. To them, it does not reflect unfavorably upon the capitalist system which they interpret as one step in the historic development of man.

The ultimate goal is communism when there will be a universal system of life during which government will be unnecessary and will wither away.

Different Forms

The present stage of the Russian government is called socialistic, which is a stage toward communism. There are many different forms of socialism. For instance, the British Labour party regards itself as socialistic but its social and economic concepts are very different from the Russians. The Red Chinese are socialists but their system is closer to that of the Spartans with an approach to some Russian ideas during the first ten years of the Russian revolution.

Sukarno in Indonesia regards himself as a socialist but his system runs closer to Mussolini's. In fact, Mussolini was for much of his life an active socialist, the editor of the socialist paper, "Avanti," and the protégé of Angelica Balabanov who was closely associated with Lenin at one time.

What is interesting about Kozlov's paragraph, in this era when words count for so much, is that Kozlov does not say that the victory will be for Marxism-Leninism. His point simply is that the two systems, the American and the Russian, the capitalist and the socialist, are different and that ultimately the United States will accept the Russian way of life.

Closed to U. S.

It is interesting to note, however, that year by year the Russians come closer to an older American way of life; that Russia's departures from primitive Marxism are notable and that the present Russian system, with certain modifications, resembles the United States of Mark Hanna rather than the Russia of Lenin.

The first point is the departure from the communist concept of "to each according to his needs." This was the essence of the revolt against capitalism and holds that each individual earns what he can by his own efforts. Today, while in both the United States and Great Britain the dole provides for those who either cannot or will not work, in Soviet Russia everybody must accept employment and wages are paid according to ability and achievement.

In fact, in Soviet Russia the "speed-up" in industry is such as our labor unions will not tolerate and automation is regarded as the inevitable, scientific development of industry. There it is not the social function of labor unions to interfere with the functions of management.

Graduated Wages

Wages are graduated and reach the figure of 360,000 roubles a year, which is about as high as they go in the United States, each in local currency. The basic difference is that certain categories of persons are relieved of taxation in Russia because of their services to the state and are given special privileges.

Thus an elite is formed which is the equivalent of an ancient aristocracy. Such categories, apart from the managerial class, include scientists, notable physicians, writers, ballerinas, etc.

Satellite System

This then is the second generations departure from Marxism-Leninism, words which Kozlov would ordinarily just can't believe I'm not a use to describe the Russian system. All industry in Russia is monopolistic and the monopoly is state owned and managed. He was a good cop," he aged.

This is true in the satellites.

Boys Choose Wrong Target for Mischief—A Policeman's Car

San Francisco — Three small boys picked the wrong target when they slid a 25-pound chunk of ice down a steep hill toward an automobile.

In the car was Policeman Dennis Johnstone, 35. The ice bounded into the right front fender. Johnstone swerved to the left, then to the right, struck a curb, then a tree.

He was thrown from the car and slid 12 feet down the hill. As he watched the kids disappearing over a backyard fence, he remembered a recent department order that officers must present proof of the cause of all accidents involving police property.

Despite cuts and bruises, he chased the boys over the fences and collared them. Then he served their parents with citations accusing the boys with malicious mischief. They have a date in juvenile court.

A Packing-House Clerk, who twice had to give up his study for the priesthood because of ill health, became one of the great benefactors of youth, Father Flanagan, founder of Boys Town, Neb.

He believed "there is no such thing as a bad boy," only a victim of family or social conditions. Thousands entrusted to his care, who became strong citizens, successful businss and professional men, farmers, courageous soldiers, are testimonies to his faith in youth. On a borrowed $90 and his own salary—"Faith is a kind of capital, too," he said—he gathered homeless, abandoned, abused and misdirected boys into a rented house on Omaha in 1917 and gave them the love that had been missing in their lives. Each boy, Protestant, Catholic, Jew, was encouraged in his faith. Through prayers, sweat and gifts Boys Town grew until today it comprises 50 buildings on 1,000 acres, a home and school for youth of every race, color and creed.

Father Flanagan never ceased his fight for youth: He left a hospital bed to travel and plead for an imprisoned 12-year-old. He fought for humane reform schools. He was officially called to the Orient after the war to help solve the problem of homeless youth. Then to Austria and Berlin, where he died, still seeking to uplift the morale of youth.

His score was the lowest in league play for the season.

Despite his hot round, part of the limelight swung to Bob Derus who tied the course record by shooting a 4-under par 31 on his second round. Included in the low score was one penalty stroke. Derus tied the score posted by Tom Dupont earlier this season and Lou Glaser, club pro, last year.

Lawrence Van Zummeran finished with par 35 while Jim Minkebigge, Earl Schuler, Russ Torgeson and Tom Gossens all had 36. Blind bogey winners were Don Van Abel, Jim Minkebigge, Jim McFadden and Bob Grogan. Special prizes went to Will Van Abel, Don Van Abel, Red Fassbender, Tom Lamers, Rich Vandenhuevel and Les Smith.

The Dixon-Yates Contract Was Valid

The U. S. Court of Claims has upheld the famous Dixon-Yates contract as legal and has ordered the U. S. government to pay $1,867,545.56 to reimburse the Dixon-Yates combine for out-of-pocket expenses before the contract was cancelled.

The government got into this controversy because congress declined to make an appropriation to the TVA for a new electric generating plant at Fulton, Tenn. Because the Atomic Energy commission was demanding more electric power from TVA a shortage was threatened in the Memphis area. Two men named Dixon and Yates, connected with the private utility business in the area, agreed to organize a new company known as the Mississippi Valley Generating company to build a plant to supply the shortage. There was nothing unusual about the offer because a few years earlier, in 1950 and 1952 under the Truman administration, the AEC had signed contracts with private electric utility companies for power to be delivered to it at Paducah, Ky., and Portsmouth, Ohio. These contracts were very similar to the one negotiated under the Eisenhower administration with the Dixon-Yates organization.

Under the Democratic administration, the contract at Paducah called for payment of 4.08 mills per electric kilowatt hour, that at Portsmouth, also under the Democratic administration, fixed the price at 3.97 mills, and the Dixon-Yates contract had the figure of 3.99 mills. Apparently the advocates of public power had no fear of the contracts issued negotiated by the Truman administration but they were terrified by the one set up under the Eisenhower administration with the Dixon-Yates organization.

There were outcries of a scandal in the Dixon-Yates contract. The administration was accused of a big give-away to Dixon-Yates. The friends of the TVA, especially the senators and representatives of Tennessee, could see the Dixon-Yates contract only as a step in the direction of destroying TVA.

Finally the city of Memphis through its mayor, Frank Tobey, announced that it would not accept power from the Dixon-

Yates plant and that it intended to build a $100,000,000 plant of its own. It was at that point, in July, 1955, that President Eisenhower cancelled the contract with Dixon-Yates with the announcement that he had received assurances from the city of Memphis that it would proceed with the construction of the plant, thus making the Dixon-Yates plant unnecessary. However, the Dixon-Yates organization had gone to considerable expense in preparing to carry out the contract and after failing to win a settlement with the government it went to court and the court has now decided the case in its favor.

During the verbal and written assaults upon the Dixon-Yates contract, by the supporters of public power and the Democrats generally, much was made of the part that Adolphe H. Wenzell played in negotiating the contract. It was held that since Wenzell had served as a consultant to the Budget Bureau at the same time he was a salaried official for the First Boston corporation which became financial agent for Dixon-Yates interests, there was a conflict of interest in his two jobs which made it doubtful that the government had received fair treatment. To hear the Democrats scold one might have thought that through Wenzell the Dixon-Yates group had been given the key to the United States Treasury. Thus when the government had to go to court in an effort to refute the Dixon-Yates claim for loss in their contract the Department of Justice picked up the Wenzell conflict of interest charge and used it in challenging the contract. This brought further outcries from the Democrats who declared it was an admission by the United States government that it had been double dealing in the Dixon-Yates contract. Now, however, people will be interested and take special notice in the decision by the U. S. Court of Claims which said the court saw "not the slightest conflict of interest in Wenzell's position."

Democratic Tennessee smears against the administration have been pretty well wiped out by the court's decision and it's perhaps worth nearly $2,000,000 to have accomplished that.

Cancer Probably Is Not Hereditary

Dr. Douglas P. Murphy, emeritus professor of gynecology at the University of Pennsylvania, and Helen Abbey, assistant professor of biostatistics at Johns Hopkins University, have just completed an extensive study which indicates that cancer does not run in the family.

This should be a great relief to many people who have a family history of cancer. Many of them have entertained the belief that their death by cancer is almost certain because their parents, their grandparents and other close relatives have died of cancer. This study should relieve their minds because it is the most complete on this subject yet made. The belief that heredity is a factor in cancer was stimulated considerably by a study made about 10 years ago by one scientist who arrived at the conclusion it was a factor. His study included interviews with relatives of 20 women with breast cancer.

However, the present study covered a much wider field. Profs. Murphy and Abbey estimate that the interviewing done by their four field workers would have taken one person working full time 25 years. As it was the study extended over six years. Their investigation covered 12,000 relatives of 200 women with breast cancer and 198 women without cancer. Their conclusion was that there is no statistical difference in the frequency of cancer among relatives of the cancer stricken women and the relatives of the control groups.

We are not certain what the study will contribute to the general war against cancer but it should have a good effect upon the minds of many people who have been living in a sort of fear that they were doomed to death by cancer because of tendencies they had inherited.

A Parking Problem

Parking spaces are difficult to find and so the disappointment of a driver is great when he comes upon one but is unable to maneuver his car into it. Because cars have been getting longer and parking spaces have remained standard, an open space may be unusable because other drivers along the street have carelessly parked their cars so that they slightly overlap into more than one space.

To meet this problem Bryan Wilson, traffic engineer for the American Automobile association's Wisconsin division, has suggested "tandem" or "pair" parking. To accomplish this form of parking Wilson sets up two 18-foot parking spaces allowing 4 feet of maneuvering space in front of one parked car and four feet behind the other of the pair of parked cars. Thus the two 18-foot parking spaces with four feet of maneuvering space for each car requires the same amount of space as two of the present 22-foot spaces. However the result is that each car has eight feet of maneuvering space either in front of it or in back of it for use in getting into or leaving the parking space.

In tests in cities where this design is employed, the average time used for parking a car has been reduced from 32 seconds to less than 14 seconds. For women drivers the average time for parking dropped from 37.4 seconds to 15.9 seconds.

Thus the design not only is a convenience for drivers but also causes a much briefer interruption. Important to the success of such a plan, however, is the need for drivers to park their cars tightly in pairs so that each gets full advantage of the maneuvering space.

Discontinue Charging Extra For a Glass of Milk on Menu

From The Progressive Farmer

When you eat out in many southern towns or cities you are charged extra for milk. But on most menus coffee or tea is included with the meal at no extra charge. Why is it we milk drinkers must pay 5 to 15 cents extra if we ask for milk and don't take tea or coffee? Why hasn't the dairy industry obtained the cooperation of restaurants, cafe owners and had milk along with tea or coffee on menus and included in the price of meals?

We understand that a choice of milk, coffee or tea is a part of a meal in many northern restaurants, with no extra charge being made for a glass of milk.

Most milk sold by restaurants and cafes is produced and distributed locally. By giving milk an equal break, restaurants owners and managers would be supporting local producers. Too, they would no longer be penalizing people with good health habits, who recognize the need for milk and dairy products in the diet. The U. S. Public Health Service says, "Of all the factors of man's environment, none is more important to his welfare than food. Of all foods, none is more important than milk."

A glass of milk costs the restaurant owner more than the coffee, hot water and maybe sugar and cream that go into or with a cup of coffee. But many restaurants serve a second cup of coffee or glass of tea without any extra charge. It takes more labor to make and serve coffee than to serve milk. A cup, saucer, and spoon are used when

Fur Trading Post Required Men of Varied Skills

Management, 'Engages' Had Social System

BY JACK RUDOLPH
Post-Crescent News Service

Because it had to be self-sufficient and isolated for long periods, the fur trading post was an elaborate establishment. The actual operation of a post as well as of the communications supporting it required large numbers of men. Over a period of more than 200 years this organization became standardized and refined by experience. In the Great Lakes region this experience was French, and the system utilized French methods and usually French terms.

The boss or manager of a post was called the "bourgeois," although he was known as a factor in the British system, which called its posts "factories."

The bourgeois, who was usually a partner in the company or an independent on his own, had to be a leader of great administrative ability, since he combined the functions of business management and command. His authority was absolute, discipline was strict, and both were maintained by rigid rank distinctions. Some of the larger companies even put their bourgeois in distinctive uniform.

Last of Four Articles

Equal in rank and authority to the bourgeois was the "partisan," who commanded the brigades of canoes that moved back and forth from company headquarters to field installations. Partisans not only led these fleets but often commanded special trading or exploring expeditions deeper into the interior.

Social Status

Next in importance and in direct line for promotion was the "clerk." The latter, who functioned as bookkeeper and post adjutant, enjoyed the same social status as his boss and usually took charge in his absence.

Clerks were sometimes partners in an enterprise

'These Guys Aren't Even Members of Congress, Much Less Texans'

but usually salaried employees. If a clerk was capable enough he was given experience in actual trading by being sent to the field to live among the Indians and trade directly with them.

In addition to maintaining the elaborate books and inventories necessary to a system that existed entirely on an exchange of credits, the clerk also handled the voluminous correspondence and reports that the system required. Because of the nature of their duties, clerks were usually better educated than the rest of the trading fraternity and often wound up among its aristocracy.

The 'Engages'

Below the administrative echelon was the great mass of salaried employees called "engages." This group was divided into three classes — "voyageurs," "artisans," and apprentices or "mangeurs du lard."

The voyageurs or boatmen constituted about 80 per cent of the engages and were the most colorful and picturesque members of the system. Mostly French-Canadians, they provided the motive power for the indispensable cargo canoes and bateaux. Through several generations they developed into an almost distinct breed.

The voyageur was a mild sort although possessed of a mercurial temper when aroused. He was wholly illiterate, carefree and good natured but with tremendous physical endurance, obedient, loyal and willing to work until he dropped. For all the romantic aura with which he has been clothed, however, the voyageur lacked physical courage and was scared to death of Indians. Without him the trade would have been well nigh impossible.

Skilled Men

Artisans were the housekeepers of the trade, and their ranks included all the skilled labor other than the boatmen. They were blacksmiths, carpenters, boat builders and on occasion, even farmers. In fact, they were used for just about every type of labor. Many of Wisconsin's first permanent settlers arrived here as fur company artisans.

Lowest on the social and labor scale were the "mangeurs du lard," as the new recruits or apprentices were derisively called. These men were usually young and sent out from Canada under indenture for five years.

Because, on their outward journey, they were fed a ration of salt pork, hard bread and pea soup, they acquired

Under the Capitol Dome

Here's Background of State's Surtax Policy

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison — In the Wisconsin legislature there has grown up over the long decade a custom of extending official congratulations, on engraved paper, to great numbers of people who have attained rank or distinction that attracts the eye of a diligent legislative politician. The range can be from Miss Wisconsin to the coach of the winning tournament basketball team.

It strikes this writer that the legislature has neglected a worthy citizen who has done yeoman service for these politicians for a long time — the surtaxpayer.

This is surtax time in the state capitol. Each biennium at this time the capitol suddenly wakes up to the fact that spending has been a little too fast for the state of the treasury and there breaks out in the public prints a rash of speculation about the increased rates at which the state income surtax for the next two years will probably be levied.

THE WONDER

The surtax is a wonderful thing, to the statehouse politician.

It is a good deal like the loafer's brother-in-law — always good for another touch. The legislator who wouldn't dare suggest a revision in the income tax rates as such casually talks about boosting the surtax — with a consciousness of political immunity. The surtax ought to be understood. It is simple enough. But it is not.

Just now the state is levying a surtax at the rate of 20 per cent. In simplest terms, it is a tax upon a tax. It means that if you owe $100 in income taxes, you add another $20 for the surtax. Currently the speculation is that the rate may go to 30 or 35 or 40 per cent. That will mean that you will add $30, or $35 or $40 per $100 in you state income tax.

Easy? Of course. Yet the fact is that the surtax has many irrelevant implications that make it one of the safest expedients of a legislature or a governor to make good when spending has out-run resources.

It has always had a "soak the rich sound," probably because of the superb propaganda skills of the LaFollette party which originally devised it. There was the student editor at the state university, only a few years ago, who solemnly assured his readers that it applied only to the highest bracket incomes.

It is also familiar. During most of the years of the lives of most adults in the state there has been a surtax of some kind. The rate has fluctuated. Once it got as high as 60 per cent. There was no particular reaction, nor was there any particular expression of gratitude when a lucky regime a little later was able to cut it down gradually.

THE GIMMICK

There are mechanical reasons why the surtax is irresistible to the politician. Historically the state has pretended to share its income tax yield with the local governments. In practice it has violated that unwritten compact for a quarter of a century — through the device of a surtax. The normal income tax revenue is divided with cities, towns, villages. The surtax income is

County Crop Conditions Noted

79 YEARS AGO
Quoted from the Appleton Crescent for the week of July 17, 1880.

A gentleman who has traversed the towns of Centre, Ellington and Greenville informs us that notwithstanding the terrific storms, the spring wheat never looked any more promising and the acreage sown is largely in excess of any previous season.

Corn and potatoes are much farther advanced than in any previous season for 20 years. Barley and oats promise a very heavy yield. The stories about damage from rust are unfounded.

In Grand Chute, barley and oats are damaged to some extent by being blown down and the chinch bug is scalping the wheat.

Dale has embarked immensely in raising potatoes for exportation and they look fine. The same with corn.

Wheat and barley are damaged some, but not as badly as first reported.

In Freedom, much grain of different kinds was blown down, but the extent of the damage cannot yet be accurately determined.

Chinch bug has appeared in Buchanan and Kaukauna, and in some fields the weevil is at work.

Throughout the county, the winter wheat is a dead fail-

Marsh hay, so largely cut on the Wolf river bottoms, and the Rat river marshes, will not be cut this year because of flooding.

NBC-TV Reveals Plans For Coming Specials

Grammy Awards Promise More Than Emmy, Oscar Events, Jingo Says

BY JINGO
Plans for some of the specials it has booked for next season have been revealed by NBC-TV.
Kay Starr will star in two of them. One will be based on Texas Guinan, high-riding night club queen of the 1920s. The other will be "The Lord Don't Play No Favorites" and will co-star Louis "Satchmo" Armstrong and Tennessee Ernie Ford.
Debbie Reynolds, Nanette Fabray, the Ritz Brothers and a cavalcade of songs from George White's "Scandals" are down for separate nights.
Still another 90-minute spec will focus entirely on Hollywood Producer Arthur Freed. It'll feature songs written by him or used by him in some of the movies' most memorable musicals.
The Grammy Awards, an event with some promise of entertainment, will be on television next year ahead of the not-so-successful Oscar and Emmy Awards.

Grammy awards are given for the best recording (gramophone) artists of the year. Winners will be called upon to sing.

Warner Brothers' television company is turning the old WB movie, "Four Daughters," into a TV series. The film starred the late John Garfield and the four Lane sisters. "Her-cules" is proving such a hit in theaters, the producer has signed Steve Reeves, the body beautiful, to headline the TV series next year.

Art Carney is trying to buy the old film classic, "The Informant." He wants to play Victor McLaglen's part. Dinah Shore's first guest when she returns to her Sunday night show will be Tommy Sands. Speaking of specs, David Susskind has TV rights to "Random Harvest" and will beam the old Greer Garson-Walter Pidgeon picture as a spec this fall.

Pat Boone says he'll make a telefilm series for teenagers based on his best-selling book, "Twist Twelve and Twenty." Here are some of the leading ladies who'll appear in ABC-TV's new "Adventures in Paradise" series: Joan Collins, Julie London, Dianna Lynn, Patricia Medina, Anna Kashfi, Hazel Court and Paulette Goddard.

NBC-TV will telecast three races from Monmouth park, Oceanport, N. J., on successive Saturday afternoons, starting next week. Clement R. Attlee, former British prime minister, and David Low, Britain's leading political cartoonist, are the first personalities announced in a schedule of 13 new "conversations" to be presented by NBC-TV's "Wisdom" series during next season.

Ed Sullivan has signed Singer Teresa Brewer for three appearances on his show next season, the first probably in September. Jack Carson will play Henry Comstock, for whom the fabulous Comstock lode was named, in the "Bonanza" series, another new western.

Miss Ingersoll was not excommunicated by her defiance of the archbishop's ruling. However, she is barred from receiving the church's sacraments of confession and communion for an indefinite period. This, she said, is a "horrible prospect."

Nelson Bill Passed by State Senate

New Law Places Government Units In One Department

Madison—Gov. Nelson's major state-departmental reorganization bill was passed 92 to 3, by the assembly Thursday.
The bill, passed earlier by the senate, would move the departments of planning, engineering, purchasing, personnel and research into one unit to be known as the Department of Administration. It estimated it would save the state about $750,000 a year by Warren Grady (R-year Port Washington), Frank Graess (R - Sturgeon Bay); and Robert Haase (R - Marinette).

The measure was the first of the governor's major proposals to clear the Republican-controlled senate. The reorganization, which would take place almost immediately, would be the first of any consequence since 1939.
Oppose Bill
Main opposition to the bill came from the State Employees association which contended it might make "political manipulation possible" in state civil service. The bureau of personnel, which would be included in the change, administered the civil service affairs. Howard Koop of Milwaukee, an insurance company executive and on loan to the governor's office, drafted the measure. He estimated it would save the state about $750,000 a year.

Best Test of Controlled Drinker—Who Is the Boss, Man or Drink?

BY HOWARD WHITMAN

If a man went to a football game, jumped up and down in the stands and yelled his head off, you'd simply say, "Good fellow, he's having fun." But if the same man went to an empty stadium and did the same thing—alone—you'd say there was something wrong.

Same way with drinking. When drinking is part of a social ceremony, an eating ceremony, or just plain camaraderie it is simply a part of our culture. But when someone holes up with a bottle all by himself and drinks at strange hours, there's something wrong.

A hundred scientists have tried to differentiate between the controlled drinker and the problem drinker. But there's no chemical difference, no physiological difference, and the amount they drink may have nothing to do with it. Many a controlled drinker can drink the alcoholic under the table.

The only real differences are (1) why they drink and (2) their ability to take a few drinks and stop.

"Stop" doesn't mean going on the wagon. Most any problem drinker can do that—for a time. As the man said, "It's easy to stop drinking. I've done it hundreds of times."

The thing that's tough is to keep on drinking—without drinking too much. This, once

This is the last in a series of 12 articles on today's drinking patterns and how you may be involved in them.

a man has become a full-blown alcoholic, he can never do. He has conditioned his boss? When he desperately wishes he didn't have to drink, and drinks anyway, isn't it clear who's boss?

Drinking is supposed to be an added pleasure in life. "The normal drinker," says a research report of the Alcoholism Research foundation of Ontario, Canada, "is a person who uses alcoholic beverages moderately, as a condiment, to satisfy thirst, for their milder sedative effects, or in their occasional social use." If drinking brings not pleasure, but pain into life and still a man has no power to resist it—he's an alcoholic.

90-Day Test

The National Council on Alcoholism prescribes a 90-day test for controlled drinking:

"For a period of three months, at least, determine not to exceed a certain number of drinks whenever drinking. The number should be not more than three. But whether one, two, or three, the number must not be exceeded under any circumstances. Absolutely no exceptions, or the test is failed."

In 90 days you'll know who's boss.

Control over liquor doesn't collapse all at once. It collapses gradually. Here are some of the cracks in the wall:

The individual begins to drink in order to meet challenging situations. He relies on bottled courage.

At a social gathering he feels inwardly tied in knots, ill at ease, unable to make contact with others, until he's started drinking.

He begins to drink to the point of regret. Time after time he feels like a heel for something he did or said under the influence.

If Drinking Brings Not Pleasure, but pain into a life and still a person has no power to resist it—that person is an alcoholic.

Escape From Problems

His drinking begins to make problems. To escape from those problems—he drinks.

He drinks at strange times, not only for conviviality when he's happy, but also all alone when he's sad.

He stops bragging about how much he can drink, and starts lying about how much he does drink.

He gets panicky at the thought of being without liquor.

"The moment I knew I was an alcoholic," one A. A. told me, "was when a friend of mine was opening a bottle of wine and got the cork stuck in the bottle. I got panicky. I sort of gasped, 'Get that cork out,' as if it were a matter of life and death."

Control is much easier in the early stages than later on. And many people could manage alcohol satisfactorily all their lives if they weren't pushed. The businessman feels he is "required" to have that cocktail at the business lunch. The man or woman at a party feels pressured into taking the proffered drink.

Feel Out of Step

"Why is it," asks Harold Demone, Massachusetts commissioner on alcoholism, "that if you don't take a drink you feel out of step? In Italy, the country which handles its drinking best, you can turn down wine or liquor—if you don't like it—as easily as you can turn down spinach."

The right to drink, for those who want to, has been established through bitter experience. Perhaps a new right needs attention: the right not to drink.

"Smith doesn't like alcohol," says a statement of the Manitoba Committee on Alcohol Education, in Canada. "But people are always insisting that he should drink. They say, 'Ah, come on, just a little one' or 'If you don't like rye, I think there's some Scotch in the house.' They seem to think that his not drinking is an insult to those who do. At times he is openly accused of considering himself 'better than others.'"

Sometimes poor Smith walks around with a glass of plain soda just to protect himself. He feels like a square without a glass in his hand.

More Pressure

For the benefit of Smith, as well as for the A. A. in the crowd, and for the man or woman who's trying to control the habit, no social gathering ought to pass the etiquette test unless a non-alcoholic drink is offered along with the others.

"The pressure's getting rough," a businessman who is an A. A. told me. "I met one of my customers at the airport and he insisted on buying me a drink. And I mean insisted."

"I went to the bar with him and ordered a 'Presbyterian

Assembly Sends Vets Bill Back To Committee

GOP Assemblymen Say Democrats Try To Kill Legislation

Madison — Democratic leaders in the assembly today mustered sufficient support to return to committee a bill which would enlarge the veterans housing fund with state liquor taxes.

Democratic floor leader Keith Hardie (D - Taylor) had sold party backing on the 56 to 40 vote to send the bill back to the committee, controlled by his party. He said the bill would be held there until the fall session, when a search for financing would be made.

Salvage Attempt

"I'm interested in trying to salvage something out of this bill," Hardie said.

The action came after the bill survived a close 45 to 50 vote on a motion to kill it. The bill was on a list of "must" legislation taken up at the request of the Republican minority. Four Republicans authored it.

GOP Opposition

All the minority party members except Lawrence Timmerman (R - Milwaukee) voted against the committee maneuver, contending it was merely another way of killing the bill.

The measure would divert half the state liquor tax proceeds — estimated at about $4,400,000 a year — into the housing fund.

School Costs Up $269,824 In One Year

Appleton taxpayers paid $2,081,633 to support city schools for the year ending June 30—about four-fifths of the school budget.

The expenses and income for schools are figured from June to June. The city tax levy is figured from January to January, so that school income actually is taken from two tax periods and is not an accurate reflection of actual taxpayers' expense in one year, William R. Knuth, director of business affairs, explained.

Expenses Up

Tax levy share was $277,133 greater than in 1957-58. Expenses were $269,824 greater. The difference was in the base amount of funds on hand at the beginning of the year. There was $47,897.94 more in the bank at the beginning of 1957-58 than 1958 - 59. This amount was reduced during the first period, forcing a higher burden on the taxpayer in the second period.

At the same time, state aids rose $42,500. Largest increase in expenses was $220,000 for instruction and $18,000 more debt retirement.

The Pfefferle name entered the firm from 1894 to 1907, when it was operated by Stephen Pfefferle, and from 1907 to 1938 by Ambrose Pfefferle. The bakery incorporated in 1938 with B. A. Pfefferle as president.

The firm now is under the same management, with B. A. Pfefferle as president and superintendent, and Richard Pfefferle as vice president, manager.

A total of 32,400 cubic feet of freezer and cold storage space will be installed in the new storage rooms. All of the present refrigeration equipment will be moved into the addition, giving Elm Tree a total of 43,491 cubic feet of refrigeration space. A new blast freezer, built on a wind-tunnel principle, capable of maintaining constant temperatures around 35 below zero, will be installed for quick freezing unbaked rolls, pies and pizza dough, Pfefferle said.

Pfefferle predicts employment will go up another 150 persons eventually. When the W. College avenue plant was built in 1936, it employed 130 persons. Today, employment averages 260 a week, with a peak around 275.

The giant bakery replaced small plants at 308 E. College avenue and 423 W. College avenue, used until 1956.

Soviet Premier Again Rewrites Red History

Says 1939 Alliance With Hitler Made Just to Buy Time

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington—Nikita Khrushchev again has undertaken to rewrite history. Sensitive to the charge that Stalin and the communists party, by an alliance with Hitler in 1939 made World War II possible, the Soviet premier now brazenly tells the people of Poland that the Soviets did all this "just to buy time."

Lawrence

Millions of Russians and Poles lost their lives because Stalin chose to make Hitler his ally and thus, by protecting the eastern front for the Nazis, gave them a free hand on the western front against France and Britain in the first years of World War II. But Khrushchev now says he was present when Stalin committed his act of perfidy in making an alliance with Hitler and that this action was fully justified. One wonders how the Soviet premier dares to say this today to the very people of Poland who, as a consequence thereof, lost their independence.

Smarting at Charges Just why Khrushchev brought up the Soviet-Nazi alliance at this time isn't clear, but it seems probable that he is smarting under the charges made earlier this year by the United States government in an official analysis of the Nov. 27, 1938, note from the Soviets about Berlin. The Soviets had alleged that, prior to World War II, they had "displayed constant willingness to establish cooperation with the other powers with the object of resisting Hitlerite aggression," and that "if the western powers had not been shortsighted in their hopes of turning Hitler eastward and had cooperated with the U. S. S. R., millions of lives would have been saved."

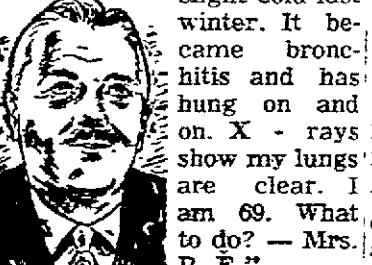

The department of state, in answering this fantastic distortion of the facts of history, said: "From 1930 to 1933 the Soviet Union through its international communist arm, the Comintern, directed the German communist party to collaborate with the Nazis and other extremists in undermining the German Weimar republic. It helped sabotage democratic parties and institutions and promoted lawlessness and disorder. This aided

Beware of Lingering Cough Masquerading as Bronchitis

By Joseph G. Mohner, M. D. There are chronic and sometimes dangerous conditions which may seem to start with a cold, yet the cold is merely incidental. The real cause is deeper.

Other Possibilities Take, for example, tuberculosis. This is a far more prevalent disease among people who are along in years than the public realizes, and the older with a chronic cough often is a greater hazard to society (and to sons, and daughters, and grandchildren) than he can possibly realize. So I say, don't pass off a chronic cough as bronchitis, when X-rays or sputum tests will readily give the true answer.

There are two other conditions that are common causes of cough among our mature population which are not infectious but are well worth identifying so they can be treated. One is bronchiectasis. (I don't mean you have to be old to have it, but it is more frequent as we grow older.) This is a dilation of parts of the bronchial tubes. Phlegm may sound the same on the surface. I want to append an effort to dislodge it.

Another is emphysema, or much more important than a dilation of the spaces in the lung—a loss of stretchiness in the lung tissues do not inflammation of the bronchial spring back as tautly as they tubes. With every chest cold should when you exhale. There will be some degree of pending on the degree. X-rays it—X-rays, at the time, may or may not show this not show anything wrong, or clearly. In severe cases, there they may show some cloud—won't be any doubt.

Still another, and much more serious, possibility, is its varying degrees, very common lung cancer, and my friends mon. It is a risky diagnosis to who specialize in chest surgery are very busy this time. There are too many causes of year treating cases of lung cancer which were passed off for weeks or months as bronchitis, or cough. Again, X-rays occur with excessive smoking are the best means of detection. Certainly a dusty occupation, or too much smog, or some other such irritant, can be the may be from some infection, or may be from allergy to culprit.

But let's keep in mind also dust or other irritants. You see my point? Calling a cold in the winter should persistent cough bronchitis be regarded with suspicion, may mean you are finding ex-

Check of Eyes Can Diagnose Stroke Early

Chicago—By checking the blood pressure of the eyes, one cause of stroke can be diagnosed even before the stroke occurs, a group of Boston physicians reports.

A common cause of paralytic stroke is the clogging of the internal carotid artery, which leads through the neck to the brain.

If an obstruction, such as a blood clot, is found in the artery early enough, it can be removed by surgery or the use of clot-dissolving drugs, thus preventing a stroke.

Internal carotid artery insufficiency can be diagnosed

McCulloch put the gadget in his electric stove, set for 160 and waited. No alarm.

While the firm representative squirmed, McCulloch raised the temperature.

by checking the blood pressure of the eyes. It is measured by a technique, called ophthalmodynamometry, is described in the July 18 Journal of the American Medical association.

The authors are Drs. J. Lawton Smith and David G. Cogan, Harvard university medical school and Massachusetts Eye and Ear infirmary, and Dr. Irving H. Zieper, Massachusetts General hospital.

Pressure Applied

In the procedure, the eyes are first dilated and anesthetized. Pressure is applied to the eyeballs and the blood pulsations are observed through the ophthalmoscope, the instrument commonly used in eye examinations.

The technique is rapid and safe, and is becoming increasingly important with the recent advent of more effective treatment of carotid artery insufficiency, the doctors noted.

In addition to its use as a diagnostic procedure, the technique can be used to check the effectiveness of treatment for carotid artery obstructions.

It should be used as a diagnostic procedure whenever patients exhibit such early signs of carotid artery obstruction as transient partial blindness; dizziness or nausea on changing posture, or weakness of the limbs on one side of the body.

Attic Theater to Give Extra Show Tuesday

Neenah Woman in Lead Roll Tells Of Theater-in-Round Experience

Attic theater will close its close. We are told to pretend presentation of "A Roomful of Roses" with performances Saturday, Sunday, Monday and an added show Tuesday to meet ticket demand.

The lead role of Nancy Fallon, a twice-wed mother with a 15-year-old problem daughter, is played by Mrs. James Buchanan, Neenah, who has "very meager" acting experience, she says, but much enthusiasm.

Last spring Mrs. Buchanan appeared in "The Robe," produced by First Presbyterian church, Neenah. While a student at Lawrence college she had the leading role in "Two on an Island." She also had a role in her junior-senior high school class play.

Family Participation

Her daughter, Barbara, is assistant to the director and prompter for "A Roomful of Roses." The high school sophomore also prompted "The Tinder Box," at the July 4 Venetian festival. She will usher at future Attic theater productions.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Belle, Appleton, Mrs. Buchanan's sister and brother-in-law, are appearing with her. Belle takes the part of Jay Fallon, Mrs. Buchanan's husband, and Mrs. Belle plays Mrs. Grace Hewitt, her best friend and neighbor.

The play will begin at 8:15 nightly in the Lawrence college music-drama center.

Dakota Bird Belt Might be Better

Report 17 Million Pheasants Killed Between 1947, '48; Believe Gunners Left 12 Million Surplus

BY DION HENDERSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

To bird hunters around the country, South Dakota has always seemed like the place where pheasants hunting was—if not actually invented—at least perfected.

Even the bad years were great, by outside standards. Now here's an added note calculated to turn the envious from apple green to dark Kelly: Even the good years weren't nearly as good as they might have been.

In fact, the state's game managers figure, the 17 million pheasant cocks harvested between 1947 and 1958 left 12 million in unneeded surplus.

Just how South Dakota's game managers figured that a million more pheasants a year could have gone to pot makes an interesting study in the elastic equations of wildlife.

In The Field

In the field, about as many boy pheasants as girl pheasants are hatched. Whatever the arguments for hunting them both — and there are some — the girl pheasants generally go more or less free. That's because there don't have to be nearly as many boy pheasants as girl pheasants to produce more pheasants.

But just what the ratio ought to be, and how it ought to be reestablished each year, is not so elementary.

For instance, production of pheasants in pens shows that one cock pheasant for each 20 hens is enough to maintain high egg fertility. Thus, in theory, 95 of each 100 cocks could be harvested each year. In practice, that would be all right if you could take a few roosters from the next pen and use them to replace birds wiped out by some unforeseen factor—sleet, a hawk or weasel, or whatever.

Twice The Number
In the field, of course, you can't. If disaster overtook the pheasant population on a limited area and the game was cleaned out, the whole population would follow suit in short order.

Therefore, game managers figure that maintaining twice the number of roosters actually necessary on a given range is the safe minimum. And some states, where pheasant hunting is so controlled that officials can work that close to the belt, actually crop as much as 90 per cent of the cock population each hunting season.

South Dakota, however, has a situation that's a little different, since the pheasant found a home away from home there and long has been more firmly established than most native birds are elsewhere.

Great Vagaries
And with management depending on wild populations, subject to more and greater vagaries of Mother Nature, the experts like to leave about 20 roosters crowing out of each hundred produced.

Now what happened during the past 12 seasons that delivered 17 million fine fat pheasant roosters to the gun hunters who traveled from far and wide to try the fabled Dakota fields?

In 1947, hunters took 40 per cent of the cocks. In 1949, they took about 55 per cent. In 1950, they harvested less than 40 per cent. After that, they started cropping more of the surplus and carried home more than 60 per cent of the available numbers in 1954, 1955, 1956 and 1958.

Statistically, that sounds pretty good. But think of all those pheasant dinners left to the crows, the foxes and the mice.

Rivers and Harbors Bill Includes Four Wisconsin Projects

BY FRANCES MCKUSICK
Post-Crescent Washington Bureau

Washington—The house Friday approved the rivers and harbors and flood control authorization bill for the fiscal year 1960 which included navigation projects on four Wisconsin harbors at a total cost of more than $4.5 million.

The projects include Menominee harbor and river, $715,000; Kewaunee harbor, $81,900; Duluth-Superior, $2,364,000 and Ashland, $1,495,000. A survey of the needs of Washburn harbor also was authorized, although no amount was named.

Rate Some Perch Spots As Superb

Madison — Perch fishing was described by the state conservation department today as superb in at least two bodies of water—Green Bay and Lake Michigan.

Reports from fieldmen told of catches running up to 100 or more.

Some good northern pike hauls were noted in waters in Waushara and Washington counties. Reports told of some lunkers ranging in weight from 17 to 22 pounds.

Muskie fishing was still good in northern counties with instances of fishermen landing some in the 20 to 30-pound class.

Good stream trout fishing is available in many sections, the department noted, adding that few were taking advantage of possibilities.

Walleyed pike fishing was identified as spotty, with success ranging from poor to bag limits. Chippewa county was singled out as a region where this type of game fish was biting better than can be expected for this time of the year.

Deer Damage Pay Issue Revived

Press for Increase in the Amount Provided for Such State Benefits

Madison — Should the state pay indemnities to farmers, gardeners and others whose crops are nibbled by wild deer?

The subject is being reviewed as deer country legislators are pressing for an increase in the amount of money provided in the state conservation department budget for the payment of deer damage claims.

The conservation department officers take a dim view of the deer damage payments.

Proper Course

The proper course is for the state to loosen its deer shooting regulations to such a degree that there are fewer surplus deer hungry enough to raid gardens and field crops, according to the department.

In recent years the deer damage fund has been limited to a modest $40,000 a year.

The department was alarmed some years ago when huge claims for damages were filed by commercial vegetable farmers who had cleared land in far northern counties and then found deer raiding their crop acres.

In the last 28 years, according to department records, such damage claims approved — many are rejected or adjusted downward — have diverted more than $650,000 from the department's fish and game budgets.

The department also honors claims for beer damages, but in lesser amounts.

BY CHUCK WRANOSKY

Hortonville — Summer time is a slow time for Outagamie county mainly because we do not have summer fishing of any importance.

We do, however, have some nice float trips which can add fishing pleasure for the summer and they are not far from most of us to travel. The Wolf river can provide some nice floating from Leeman to New London. Along this stretch you may catch bass, walleyes, northern pike and catfish.

Embarrass River

Another float trip which may provide you with some action is the Embarrass river. This river could be floated from the bridge on County Trunk F all the way to New London. Fishing here is more for bass than anything else. These two float trips can make an enjoyable afternoon

Youth Fined $75 for Car Skid, Rollover

Auto Leaves Road, Bangs Into Driveway, Lands on Its Top

Gary A. Herold, 21, Green Bay, was fined $75 and charged three points for inattentive driving after he admitted the charge in municipal court Friday.

Herold was charged after his car left Highway 54 about half a mile east of County Trunk M early Sunday morning, traveled 420 feet, hit a culvert, sailed 12 feet through the air, landed on its top and skidded another 24 feet. Three youths, including Herold, were injured. A fourth escaped injury.

The accident will add three points against Herold's driving record.

Sideswiped Car

Bruce G. Frusher, 31, Marshfield, was fined $75 for inattentive driving. He was charged after his car sideswiped another on Highway 10 near Dale this morning. The conviction and accident will cost him six points.

Frusher is awaiting trial on a charge of illegal passing in the same area July 10.

Thomas F. Young, 24, of 336 W. Washington street, was fined $75 and charged six points for driving 90 miles an hour at night. Judge Oscar J. Schmieg also revoked his license for 60 days, but held the revocation on the condition he is not arrested for the next year for a moving traffic violation.

Richard C. Sonleitner, 17, of 701 E. Donnison street, was ordered to pay $2.95 court costs and his license was revoked for 60 days for driving 45 miles an hour in a 25-mile zone on S. Memorial drive. The last 30 days of the revocation was held by the court on the condition Sonleitner is not arrested for the next year for a moving traffic violation.

Clayton Elm, 23, route 2, West DePere, was charged four points and forfeited $13.95 for driving without a license. His record indicates a motor vehicle commissioner suspension in 1957 and two convictions, in 1957 and 1958, for driving while his license was suspended.

3-Point Speeders

Charged three points each for speeding were Thomas J. P. Puetz, 22, of 601 W. Seymour street, $12 fine; Lester J. Besaw, 22, route 1, Kaukauna, $10 fine; Robert A. Lappen, 21, of 4251 W. Wisconsin avenue, $10 fine; Richard E. Lucht, 18, of 7641 Mt. Vernon street, Oshkosh, $15 fine; Keith V. Geil, 17, of 189 Gardners row, $10 fine; Harold H. Hillsberg, 22, of 1322 N. Oneida street, $10 fine; Michael G. Sordahl, 19, of 302 N. Lawe street, $10 fine; Roy G. Brownell, 18, of 1513 Lawe street, Kaukauna, $20 fine; and Dennis Sumnitch, 21, route 1, Bonduel, $28.95 forfeited.

Homer R. Earl, 17, of 1100 E. Melrose avenue, denied failing to obey an officer's signal and posted $13.95 bond for trial Aug. 7.

Ignored Signs

Charged three points each for ignoring stop signs were William J. Van Den Bogort, 18, route 2, Kaukauna, $10 fine, and Richard E. Linzmeier, 20, route 1, Seymour, $25 fine.

Frank A. DeWitt, 59, Green Bay, was charged two points and forfeited $13.95 for parking on a highway.

Fay J. Gettlinger, 44, Green Bay, forfeited $13.95 for failing to have a muffler on his car.

SPORTSMAN'S DIGEST

By Hal Sharp
LEADERS FOR FLY CASTING IN WINDS

USE SHORTER LEADERS WITH A HEAVIER TIPPET (END) THAN NORMAL SO THEY STRAIGHTEN OUT EASILY WHEN CASTING INTO THE WIND. (YOU AUTOMATICALLY GET A HEAVIER TIPPET BY CUTTING OFF THE EXISTING END OF A TAPERED LEADER.) A 6-OR 7-FT. LEADER MAY BE SUFFICIENT TO BUCK MOST WINDS.

LONG (9-TO 12-FT.) LEADER IS USED WITH BACKWINDS TO SET- TLE FLY GENTLY. USE BLOOD KNOT TO LENGTHEN LEADER WITH A FINER TIPPET.

Safety authorities say your troubles will be few if you bear in mind one objective: Apply the power of your idling engine against the direction of the force — wind, waves, or current, which ever is strongest — operating on the boat. In this way you can keep your speed in docking at a minimum, and you will have the most control.

Wind Stronger

On most closed bodies of water, the wind will be stronger than the current. In any case, decide in which direction this force is pushing your boat, and try to approach the dock against the force.

Remember, you have no brakes. The wind or current, and the reversing power of your engine, must be depended on to bring you a smooth stop.

If wind or current is parallel to the dock, come in against this force, bow angled in towards the dock slightly. Shift into reverse to stop your forward progress. Secure the bow line. Your stern will swing over towards the dock, and you can finish tying up.

With an off-the-dock wind, approach gently head on, reversing to stop your progress a foot or so from the dock. Secure the bow line; then power the stern into place.

Simplest situation is wind or current off the water. Just come close and parallel to the dock, and let your boat drift into place.

If you must approach a dock in the same direction as the wind or current, remember your braking action is lessened: use your reverse early enough. Come in parallel to the dock; secure the stern line before the bow. Otherwise, wind or current may swing your stern away from the dock.

In all cases, a boat hook or paddle is useful in preventing ungentle arrivals. And rubber fenders will help keep your rig looking new while you're learning.

A Peahen Held by Mike Garner, 15, appears unruffled despite an 18-inch-long arrow protruding from its body. Mike found the bird walking through the back yard of his Long Beach, Calif., home, which is near an archery range. Playground Program Starts New Events

Chorus Rehearsals, Play Tryouts, Square Dancing Began Thursday

Three new events began Thursday in the Appleton recreation department summer playground program. A 50-member chorus, which includes children from fourth through seventh grades from each of the 12 city playgrounds, will meet every Thursday afternoon at the recreation department dance studio at 213 N. Appleton street. It will be directed by JoAnn Buesing, a Lawrence college graduate who has a major in music and minor in drama. One representative in the age group from fifth through eighth grade from each playground will be included in the 13-character cast of "The Land of the Jesters." Tryouts were held Thursday at the dance studio for the 30-minute, 1-act play. Student to Direct Daril Riley, a drama major at Lawrence college, will direct the play and be assisted by Miss Buesing. Bonnie O'Brien, playground arts and crafts director, will be in charge of production. Weekly square dancing lessons for playground members from fifth grade through high school will be taught by Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Schneider, New London. They began Thursday evening at Pierce Park and will be at a different playground each week. The Schneiders also will teach ballroom dancing. Last Night Events On Aug. 13, the last night of the playground program, "The Land of the Jesters" and a concert by the chorus will be given and the king and queen of the playgrounds will be crowned. Other special events in the playground program include an accordion concert, directed by Larry Daehn, and rock and roll orchestra, directed by Victor Wendt. The orchestra will be at Telulah park July 23, Jones park July 23, Pierce park July Aug. 6, and Pierce park Aug. 13. Rebuild Part Of Fire-Hit Council Plant

A permit to rebuild part of the A. W. Council company plant, 1225 E. Northland avenue, was issued by the city Friday. Fire caused an estimated $17,469 damage to the plant June 10. The permit, Building Inspector Walter Bogan said, covers an estimated $2,500 basement addition. With the exception of office space, Harold Council, company owner, intends to operate in the addition and the undamaged former basement area, Bogan said. The company employs about 10 people in making engraved and routed rollers for printing, wallpaper and fancy wrapping paper. A permit also was issued to Mrs. Eva Rankin for putting a new ceiling in the building at 334 W. College avenue, site of Edward's Shoe Store and Martin J. Hupka Jeweler. Cost of work was estimated at $200.

State Reports Hike in Bulk Milk Tanks

The Wisconsin Department of Agriculture reports a 29 per cent increase since July, 1958, in the number of bulk milk tank installations on dairy farms in the state. As of July 1, 1959, 16,055 of 104,178 dairy farmers were using the bulk milk method of handling milk compared to 12,439 a year ago. The report also showed that 220 dairy plants in Wisconsin or 16.2 per cent of the 1,400 in the state are serving bulk tank users. Twenty-six out-of-state dairy plants are also receiving milk from Wisconsin bulk plants. The first bulk milk plant installation was reported February, 1952, with 30 patrons. The first year saw 370 new patrons and 11 additional dairy producers joining the trend. The growth has been rapid since then.

Summit Conference, If One Is Arranged, Expected in Geneva

Geneva —(AP)— There seems to be a tacit understanding with the Russians that the east-west summit conference —if it is arranged—will be held in Geneva. Western diplomats think it will come soon after the wind-up of Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev's Scandinavian tour Aug. 30. The United States, Britain and France are reported taking it for granted that the conference will be confined to the Big Four powers. East and West German delegates almost certainly will be along to serve as "advisers" in any talks on Berlin and the wider problems of a German peace settlement. The Germans will withdraw when non-German issues come up. The western allies seem sure that the Soviet union does not intend to press overly hard for the admission of Poland and Czechoslovakia as full participants at the summit talks. If they are right, the prospects are dim that such nations as Italy and Yugoslavia will be invited.

American Heritage

Growth of the Railroads Prompted First Dime Novels

CONT. FROM PAGE 16 of gentlemanliness. In this case the eternally surprised reader would find his hero ultimately restored to the fame and fortune which he had lost through the machinations of the villain. On the other hand, he might frankly work — or fight — his way upward from rags to riches. Even in the Nineteenth century this Horatio Alger theme had provoked a scolding from the moralists because of its lack of realism in dealing with the problems facing youth in modern industrial society. The dime novel worshipped success, as it exalted danger and adventure; it instilled many of our subconscious habits of thought. It was a common thing, cheap to buy, and like most common things, rarely preserved. But those few yellowed thrillers that survive have more than a mere nostalgic interest, for they teach us a great deal about our nationalistic ways and our creed of self-reliance. To this day they reflect, however crudely, the American spirit of an earlier and perhaps more innocent age. (Copyright, 1959) Distributed by AP Newsfeatures

Conference Report

Other Communities Have Similar Juvenile Problems, Judge Says

By Judge Stanley A. Staidl

I came away from this conference realizing that the problems with other communities, save the very large cities, are no different than those which O utagamie county is now experiencing. A diel P. Stewart, mayor of Salt Lake City, Utah, in Judge Staidl his welcoming address to the judges made this personal observation—"when the housewife began to work, our juvenile troubles began to increase. You can lick this problem only by having more housewives stay at home instead of away from home.

County Judge Stanley A. Staidl recently attended the 22nd annual national conference of juvenile judges in Salt Lake City, Utah. This is his report to the Outagamie county board of what went on during the 4-day session.

Show me a home where the mother is showing her interest in house and in her children, willing to cook a good meal for the children, with a few goodies thrown in, and I'll show you a home where juvenile delinquency is less prevalent.

Weak Assertion "In my opinion the weakest assertion that can be made by parents today is to say 'I don't want my children to have to go through the hardships and the deprivations that I went through,' who are putting in long hours working—in many cases the mother as well as the father—in an effort to increase their financial standing, neglecting the moral welfare of the children which ultimately tends towards their delinquency. An analysis of statistics shows that only 50 out of every 1,000 important persons come from wealthy families and that 950 come from families of hard working people of small means."

Gov. Robert E. Smylie of Idaho is the youngest governor now holding office, has a large family and was a son of a Methodist Minister. "Going To Dogs" He told the conference, "I do not think that the younger generation is going to the dogs any more than they were supposed to be going to the dogs when my father, a Methodist minister, disgusted with my antics at the age of 17, kicked me out of the house and threw me on my own resources, thus waking me up. He thought I was a juvenile delinquent in his day, I wonder what he would think now if he were still living. I will admit that the children of today are going a little more out of line than then. "We may well have to conclude that grandfather was right after all, that there is no substitute for the wood sheds and the willow switch in the building of an industrious, civilized and disciplined human character. There is no easy answer that will solve America's problems in juvenile delinquency any more than there is any easy answer to our problems in making adults behave in a manner that is acceptable and tolerable to society. The home, schools and officials must aid in curbing delinquency. "In Idaho a committee of our juvenile judges is now working on a pilot plan which can be presented to the state forestry officials which may provide additional productive outdoor work for young men. We need to gear our high school programs so that both academic and vocational opportunities are offered these youngsters. It is only by doing this, that this problem, in some measure, can be licked."

The juvenile judges were divided into five groups according to population of the jurisdiction of the individual judge. I found myself in the third group, whose population covered 75,000 to 150,000 people.

TV Programs In answer to the accusation that the TV programs of today have a bad influence, George D. Crothers, director of public relations of Columbia Broadcasting System said, "It isn't the violence on the program that makes it unacceptable for young viewers, but the difficulty in distinguishing what's right, and what's wrong." He said children need mental stability, need teaching in morality and ethics. They need a place where they can go to feel secure, to win approval and protection from the confusions of life. He admitted that television is limited in its ability to provide any of these things. On the matter of physical fitness, Dr. Shane McCarthy, executive director of Pres-

All Members Ratify Plans Amendment

New Executives To Meet Shortly, Wood Tells Mayor

All 10 participating members of the regional planning commission have approved the switch in executive committeemen, Appleton Mayor heartened in finding that their reasoning was along the same lines as mine. The solution lies in bringing to bear upon the parents their responsibility in bringing up their children which they have brought into this world and it should not be the burden of the local community. I likewise feel that those few who are giving the younger generation a bad name or are hampering wholesome activities should be taken out of circulation by placing them in camps designed for that purpose.

I would suggest looking into the possibility of establishing such a detention home or camp in that tract of land now known as the Plamann park, near Apple Creek.

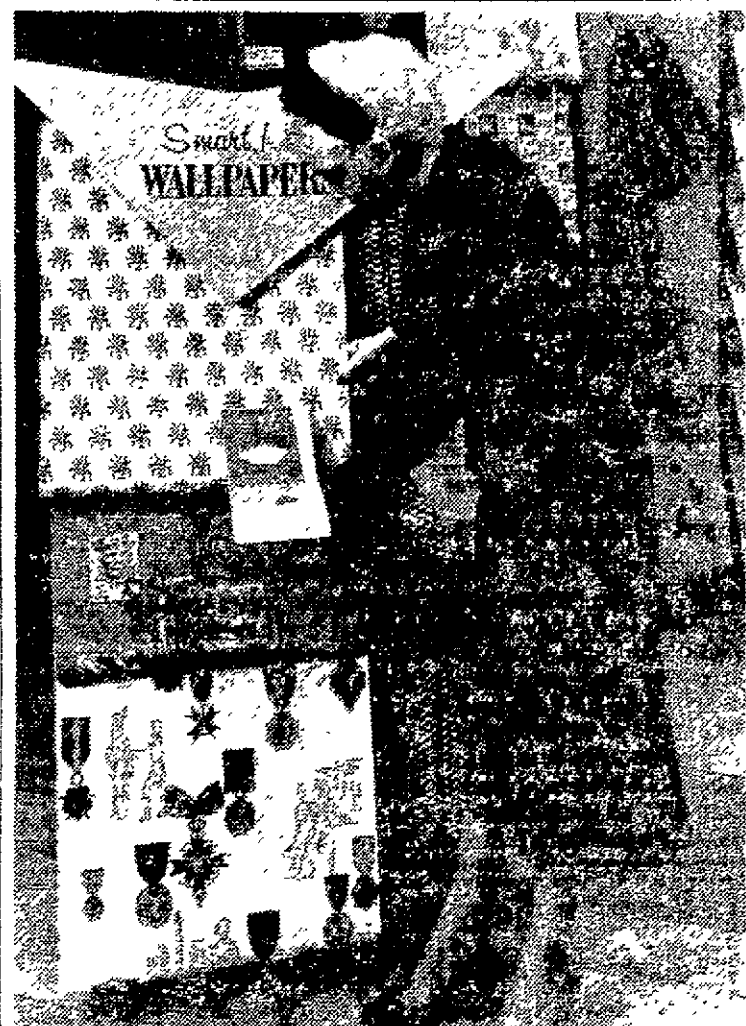

Charles Wood, commission chairman, told the mayor the first meeting of the new committee will be held shortly. The amendment to the regional plans charter calls for mayors, presidents and chairmen of cities, villages and towns to serve as executive committeemen. Lacked Knowledge Previously, an unwritten taboo required executive committee members to be free of all other government positions. This automatically limited each municipality's representation on the committee to its one citizen appointee on the commission. The Appleton planning commission was the first spokesman against the taboo. Commissioners laid blame for lengthy delay in adopting a regional plan on the executive committee. Citizen appointees, the commission said, have little knowledge of government problems and methods. Fox Cities Reservists Attend Camp

About 300 men from the Fox Cities in Wisconsin's 84th Division will be among 3,500 division members leaving their civilian jobs to train at Camp McCoy for two weeks beginning Sunday. The Fox Cities unit participating will be the 274th Regiment. A total of 43 men from the regimental headquarters in Menasha, and 260 men in the first battalion from Appleton and the second battalion from Menasha will attend. The regiment's commanding officer will be Lt. Col. Bert J. Dunlap. Maj. Clarence West and Maj. Robert Greenwalt, both Appleton, will command the battalions. Travel by Bus The assembly of Wisconsin reservists will be the first since the reorganization of the division. The 84th is the largest army reserve training division in the nation. In contrast to previous years, no long convoy of military vehicles will wind its way to Camp McCoy. The civilian soldiers will travel on commercial bus lines to avoid conflict with civilian traffic on the major highways. Advance elements of the division will arrive at Camp McCoy today to prepare for the arrival of troops.

History Repeats Itself in the "Schuyler House Parlor" wallpaper this young homemaker is examining in the Sherwin-Williams Paint Co., 302 E. College avenue. The print is an exact copy of the 18th century wallpaper used in Schuyler House, summer residence of Revolutionary War hero General Philip Schuyler, at Schuyler, N. Y. This pattern is typical of the authentic reproductions of historic wallpaper designs now gaining favor in modern decoration.

An old decorating favorite ny years. Small provincial prints lend themselves to imaginative use on ceilings as well as walls. Pictorial scenes are being used to create an illusion of space in small rooms and an air of grandeur in large rooms. Especially interesting are the authentic reproductions of early American and other historic designs.

According to Chuck Shannon, manager of the Sherwin-Williams branch at 302 E. College avenue, the renewed interest in wallpaper is nation-wide and Appleton is right in step. Wallpaper colors this year are closely correlated with paint colors. Shannon indicated. The palette includes the entire range of delicate pastels, subdued colonial shades and bright contemporary hues. This color correlation makes it easy to combine paint and wallpaper in a single decorating scheme. Stripes are coming back in favor after a lapse of many years.

Thinking of Buying an Imported Car? Rollie K. Donovan, manager of Biddle Foreign Cars at Valley Fair shopping center will answer your questions and show you a good investment in a new imported car or a reconditioned used car.

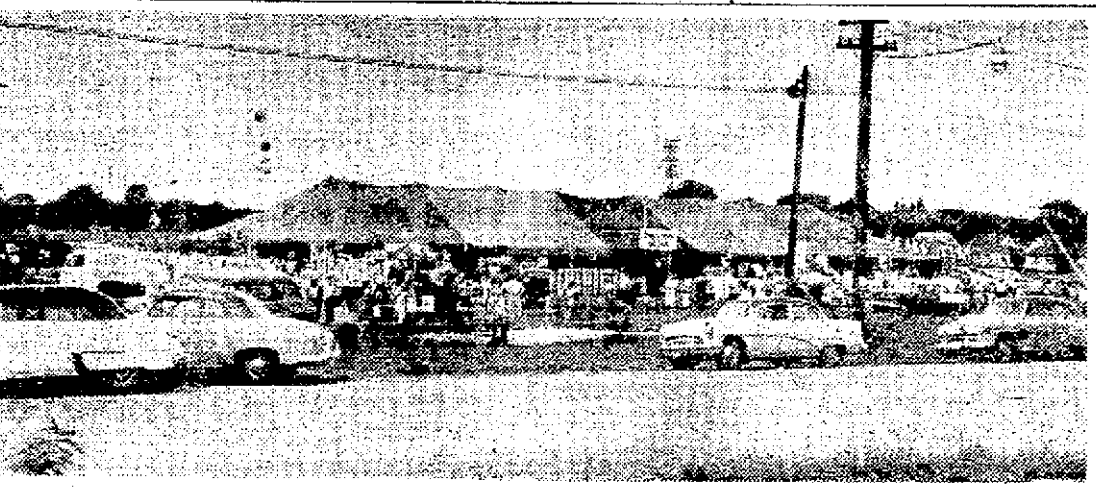

Donovan says you really get more for your money in an imported car because of the much greater gas mileage, the greater durability and efficiency and with most imported cars, depreciation is often less. The economy cars run from as low as $1400. They are not as fast as sports cars but handle easily and are economical to operate.

What happens if you break an important part, Donovan is often asked. He answers that parts for well-known cars which have been distributed in the United States for several years have built up parts depots. These include Morris, Austin, MG, Magnette, Austin-Healey, Sprite and Riley.

Donovan added that in England a car is often bought for a family's generation and the maker is expected to produce a car that'll last 25 years. The firm has issued an invitation to come in the beautiful showroom at Valley Fair and browse around, know the facts, drive the cars and judge for yourself.

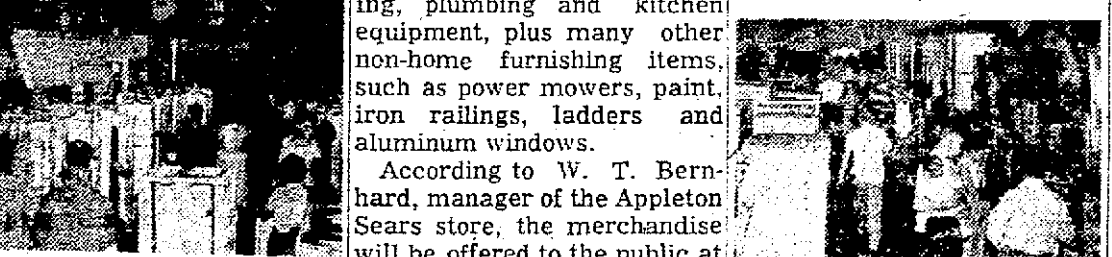

Valley Fair was also chosen for Biddle's used car lot, with plenty of customer parking available and good illumination. Donovan says they are always stocked with a fine selection of reconditioned used cars.

The phone number at Biddle's is RE 4-3348.

Furnace Oil May Be The Last Thing you want to think about right now, but if Summer fill of Skelly Furnace Oil can mean big savings for you next winter, according to John Jenkel, owner and manager of Jenkel Oil company, 1201 N. Badger avenue. Phone number for fast delivery is RE 9-1144.

Jenkel Oil company is a home owned local business. John Jenkel warned readers today that a storage tank left empty through the hot summer can rust from condensation by the time cold weather comes around.

A summer fill with Skelly Furnace Oil is particularly effective, Jenkel says, because the amazing anti-clog additive SK-12 prevents crusty deposits that clog burner nozzles and fuel lines. SK-12 protects oil filters from sticky, strangling gum and carbon.

Skelly Furnace Oil also gives you the highest possible BTU output for enjoyable, dependable heating comfort all winter, Jenkel adds. So don't wait for winter winds to start to howl. Call Jenkel Oil company right now for a summer fill of Skelly Furnace Oil with SK-12. The telephone number is RE 9-1144.

Woven Wool Suits Also notable are suits of woven wool tapestries, in muted Renaissance colors, looking new and more elegant than a solid gold Rolls Royce. For evening wear there are such little items as a short dance dress of chartreuse lace completely embroidered in iridescent pearl paillettes, a full-length gown in wheat-patterned white and gold cut velvet, and a completely straight, floor-length sheath made entirely of silver bugle beads, for a modern and wealthy Joan of Arc.

Larry Aldrich, art collector and ardent advocate of the unbelted silhouette, shows dresses with waistlines this season, but several can convert to the chemise by removing a tie belt.

Anne Fogarty, who always has believed that if a girl has a slim waist she should show it, accents her theme with a gay, young and exciting collection with both full and narrow skirts, but always with waistline accents. A highlight is her walking suit in brown and gray plaid. Another is a slacks-and-topper outfit of beige and white blanket plaid.

It's a great year for a woman to look like a million and act like a college girl in jeans.

Equip Camper With Shoe Wardrobe

Check your child's shoes before you send him off to the hills—or seashore this summer. A frequent complaint of camp directors is that mothers neglect footwear when getting together wardrobes for young campers.

Unsuitable or ill-fitting shoes can cause foot troubles which may bar a youngster from participating in his favorite camp activity—whether it's baseball or climbing mountain trails.

So while you're on the camp clothing list, you might make certain your youngster has enough shoes of the proper size to take him through two action-packed months. A sensible shoe wardrobe for the camper includes the pair of laced leather oxfords he's wearing, an alternate pair of the same sturdy shoes—consult with the shoe clerk whether they should be a half or full size larger—a pair of leather moccasins and the inevitable sneakers.

For rough wear—and things get rough at camp—foot specialists recommend an ox-Harold H. Lambrecht, Mayville, Its leather uppers bend-

Woman Racer Says Men Do Drive Better Than Fair Sex

Los Angeles —(AP)— "Women drivers are just not in the same league with men."

The woman who says this ought to know. She's Josie Von Neumann, who's been racing against men the last seven years and will pilot a $11,000 Ferrari in Sunday's 150-mile Grand Prix sports car race at Riverside International raceway.

"The best woman driver will never measure up to a good male driver," says 27-year-old Josie. "She doesn't have the right mental attitude. A woman is more flighty than a man. I think women lack a certain amount of concentration and they have a stronger feeling of self-preservation."

True in Traffic

Is she talking about racing only, or does this hold true in traffic, too?

"Anywhere," said Josie. "We gals are just not as competent as men."

Sunday's race will be the first time the U.S. Auto club has let a woman compete against top drivers in a national event and Miss Von Neumann admits she's "A little nervous."

Raced Out West

"But I'm dying to try it," she said.

Josie has raced against men in nearly a score of west coast races—once finishing second—but this will be her first nationwide event.

Does she really think she can win?

"My main interest Sunday will be to try to finish the race," she said in an interview. "I don't expect to place very high in that strong a field. I hope to be able to finish the 150 miles and not get in anybody's way. If I should place in the first 10 I would be very lucky."

Josie grew up in sports car racing. Her stepfather, now divorced from her mother, is Johnny Von Neumann, one of the country's top drivers, who also sells sports cars. Von Neumann isn't driving in Sunday's race, but he has entered one of his cars, a Porsche. Josie's Ferrari is owned by her mother, who gives the risky pastime her blessing.

Five-foot-four and brown-eyed, Josie is a divorcee, and has no children to dampen her love of thrills. Although she's been clocked at 150 miles an hour, she's never had an accident in a race.

White Garb Not Correct At Funeral

BY EMILY POST

Dear Mrs. Post: Last week my sister died. As the temperature was in the high 90s and the small church in which the services were held wasn't air conditioned, I wore all white, a white linen 2-piece dress, white shoes and a white hat. I have been criticized for not wearing black. I thought I read somewhere that all white was just as deep mourning as black. Was I wrong?

Answer: In the tropics, all white is considered proper mourning. But in this country, most people would be shocked to see a member of the deceased's family in white, and I do think you should have worn black at your sister's funeral.

Groom's Mother

Dear Mrs. Post: I have been asked by my nephew to take the place of his mother (my sister, now deceased) at his wedding. Never having acted in this capacity before I am completely nonplussed as to my duties. Most of the guests will be strangers to me. Will you please tell me what is expected?

Answer: Further than standing in line at the reception, there is no more expected of the groom's family than of any other guests. You will probably stand next to the bride's mother and she will introduce those who are strangers to you, and you shake hands with them and make the usual answers to what they each say to you.

Confirmation Dinner

Dear Mrs. Post: A celebrity is being invited, and will attend a dinner in honor of a friend's son's confirmation. I have learned that this "celebrity" will be seated at the family table, while the sisters and brothers of the boy will be seated at an adjoining table. Is this proper?

Answer: If the dinner were in honor of the celebrity he should of course be seated on the right of the hostess, but as this dinner is in honor of her son's confirmation, the uncle and aunts of the son should be given precedence over the celebrity and sit at the family table rather than he.

Decorative Wax Begonias Bloom When Very Small

By Katherine B. Walker

The fibrous-rooted wax begonias have always been special favorites of mine. They begin blooming when very small, and will continue to flower with only strong light. Plants can be kept bushy and compact by snipping off overlong stems, and the cut-off portions, even very short pieces, are easily rooted in water. All in all, wax begonias are a joy to the indoor gardener, and a collection of them is a lovely sight.

Unfortunately, I never have enough space to grow all the begonias I'd like to have, all at the same time. I have about ten now, and among them is a fairly new one, Charm. This has leaves lavishly mottled with white and pink if the plant is grown in sun.

With less sun, the white becomes light yellow, and the pink disappears altogether, and with too-little bright light, the mottling may disappear. You can judge how much light or sun your plant needs by the leaf coloration, although it will continue to flower with insufficient light.

Wax begonias really enjoy sun, and prefer a moderate-ly warm temperature. They also like a rich, easily-drained soil, and prefer to have it get almost dry before being watered. Wax begonias are easily killed by overwatering, if it doesn't drown them outright, it leads to diseases which are equally fatal. Be careful, then, not to overwater, but don't let the plants wilt from lack of moisture either.

I think Charm is fully as decorative as the calla begonias, and it certainly is easier to grow. Another new one which I think is attractive is

'The Ginger Peach,' Subteen Style Show Set July 30 at Elks

The second annual tea and youngsters have been invited to attend the event which will be staged from 2:30 to 4 p.m. July 30 at the Appleton Elks club. More than 350

A group of 30 subteens will model fall fashions, including school costumes, dress frocks and sportswear. Autumn styles will feature the spice tones.

A south seas theme will be carried out in entertainment and decor, with the purpose of honoring the new state of Hawaii. The Coral Islands combo will play island music.

The show, like last year's, is being produced by Mrs. Robert Sikora of Shirley's Children's Apparel. She has announced that the party will be off-limits to parents, except for those on the hostess committee. Mothers assisting as hostesses will be the Mmes. E. A. Gillling and William Playman.

Questions and Answers

I just received my first African violet plant, and recall reading that a new plant can be started from a leaf with some stem attached to it. However, I accidentally broke off a leaf without any stem; will this root?

Keep the base of the leaf in water, and it will soon root. Leaf cuttings having a piece of stem attached are usually easier to handle, but I haven't found they root any faster.

Is it too late to make poinsettia cuttings? How is this done?

Our brief sheet on poinsettias gives directions on how to take cuttings, and a copy has been sent to you. Although they are usually taken in the latter part of June, I think you will have success with ones taken now. If any reader wants a copy of the Poinsettia Sheet, it is free for the asking; please enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Pliable Plastics Give Baby New Safe Toys

AP Newfeatures

His majesty, the baby gets full benefit of recent developments of science, in a wide range of playthings employing the latest discoveries in psychology, chemistry and health.

Development of new lightweight, pliable plastics has opened up a new field of toys for the younger set.

Study of child psychology has provided new insight into the most useful toys for each age group, and health studies have pointed the way to toys that develop baby's muscles and dexterity as well as providing safeguards against possible harmful features in playthings.

Plastic Phone

The telephone, for instance, always has fascinated small fry, and now comes in a soft plastic version which clamps to a high-chair tray with a suction cup. The baby can't break it or knock it off. This new prestige toy selection has a pleasant scent and squeaks when squeezed, thus catering to baby's sense of touch, smell, sound and dexterity.

As soon as baby can sit up, his world of experience is likely to be widened by exposure to TV and motor travel. This also is reflected in toyland.

New plastic versions of the rocking horse take inspiration from TV Westerns, and the playpen crowd now has miniature sports cars and speed boats, modeled after the latest grown-up styles.

Soft vinyl faces give new cuddle appeal to stuffed animals, now available in most of the species of Noah's Ark, and preferred in king-size versions. Plastics also have improved baby's biting opportunities, with large plastic beads that are both colorful and chewable, but too big to swallow.

Featherweight Blocks

New featherweight blocks are made of fireboard, easy for the toddler to push around and pile, strong enough for him to sit on.

Most babies follow an orderly pattern of development from sound to sight, touch to firm action, reports Dr. Emma Sheehy, professor of Child Development at Teachers college, Columbia university.

She says: "Hearing apparatus appears to be complete at birth, and it isn't long before you can watch a baby's head try to turn toward the sound of a rattle or a bell. The infant's first motor control, however, is over his eyes. Bright objects which he can follow with his eyes, such as toys hung in the crib or carriage or floating toys in the bath, hold great appeal."

"Control of baby's eye movements is followed by motor control of head and neck muscles, and gradually by control over the muscles of the rest of the body. By the time the baby is three or four months old, he tries to sit up, grasp and hold toys.

"When he is five or six months old he will enjoy handling a soft doll or animal, and will reach out to grasp or tug at hanging toys. He will want objects he can watch, bang, bite, drop, push, shake and hear."

Your Problems

Fiance Wants Production of Engagement Ring Presentation

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My fiance plans to give me a ring on my 18th birthday. He's 19 and we are both high school graduates.

He insists this is one of the biggest moments of our entire lives. He wants his young brother Ann Landers to be on hand taking moving pictures of him putting the ring on my finger, the kiss to seal it, and our folks congratulating us. He claims we will be very glad we have this on film for posterity.

I am violently against this idea and have said so. I think this sacred moment should be between two people. The idea of having his kid brother hanging around with a moving picture camera makes me sick. I don't want his parents or mine looking on either.

He feels so strongly about this that he says either I agree or the engagement is off.

I thought I loved him but now I'm not so sure. Neither of us has ever dated anyone else. We've lived next door since we were 7. I'd like your opinion before I turn over the apple-cart in haste.—Wanting Privacy

Dear Wanting: If all the engagement means to him is something to take pictures of—then you'd better tip over the apple-cart and pronto.

In my opinion, you are both too young for marriage. And he's an immature 19-year-old as evidenced by this notion of what an engagement ring presentation should be.

I suggest you call off the engagement and both date others. If after a year or so you two think you were meant for each other, pick up the loose ends and go together again. You both remind me of the worm in horse radish. He thought it was the sweetest place in the world—because that was the only place he'd ever been.

DEAR ANN: I'm so confused I don't know what to do. Two years ago I divorced my husband against the violent protests of my three daughters. He begged me to reconsider, but my pride was hurt and I went through with it.

I began dating a European man and was quite thrilled with his fine manners and his warm attitude toward my daughters. Now I feel as if the bottom has dropped out of my world. He is a different person entirely.

He became very strict with the girls and they've soured on him. He made me quit work and sell my car. He had the telephone removed and insists on opening all the mail. He stopped the daily paper and I have to buy it on the stand.

Yesterday he struck the eldest girl and she threatened to tell her father. If she does tell he'll try to take all the girls from me. I know now my first husband was more of a man than this one will ever be. I shouldn't have divorced him. I'm miserable and heart sick. What shall I do?—M.M.M.

DEAR M.M.M.: This problem should be discussed Sounds like you jumped with your clergyman, from the frying pan into the fire. Maybe with luck you can get back into the frying pan.

DEAR ANN: I'm 16 and madly in love with a boy 18 who works at the gasoline station near my house. We used to go steady, but he dropped me.

The reason he dropped me is I got mad at him for standing me up on dates. Four times in a row he promised to take me to a certain movie and he didn't show up or call to say he wasn't coming.

Now I hear he's dating a girl who looks very much like me. Everyone comments on this. Do you think this means anything? Shall I call him? I think he still cares about me but he's stubborn.—Dot

Dear Dot: Quit puffing on that dream pipe. If he wanted you he wouldn't have had to settle for a substitute. Forget him. He's a heel.

Sail-Like Fullness Marks Collection of De Barentzen of Rome

BY SUE CARDOZO

Rome —(AP)— Last season's most controversial figure in Italian fashion, Patrick De Barentzen, has shown a fall and winter collection featuring sail fullness across the back, sleeves slipping forward low on the forearm and slim skirts.

Fath-trained De Barentzen's second Rome collection was the feature of the first day of the Italian showing. They continue in Rome through Sunday, then move to Florence for five more days.

De Barentzen's suit jackets are generally hip length, the skirts slim or even slight. Broad suede belts wrapped low, accented wool dresses cut in a form-fitting, slipped-sleeve motif.

Peaked Hats

Peaked pilgrim hats, velvet helmets or small tipping caps with beak-like visors topped the ensembles.

The French designer's predominant colors are black, gray and brown with splashes of orange and white.

Silk and velvet theater suits, some with low slung, billow-backed flight jackets, are featured for afternoon and evening wear.

A turtle-coat trench coat, with sleeves easing forward low on the forearm, will be a vogue in 1960. It has wide-collared neckline, and a loosely-tied belt slips down to the hip.

Shrinking sleeves, sloping shoulders and a kite-like view of the rear are favorite lines of designers Sarli and Barbara.

A woman's shoulders are well covered by their cold weather coats but her wrists are exposed. Non-choking collars creeping up to the chin and a buttonless sweep to one side also are featured in Barbara's coats.

Fabrics are conservative, particularly in daytime clothes. Chiffon and tulle predominate for evening.

King of diamonds.

This hand, which was bid and played in the International Bridge Match of 1936, is one of the few bright spots in the performance of the American team. This match, which was the first in a succession of victories for foreign teams, was won by a team representing England. However, at least they are our allies so it is not a total loss.

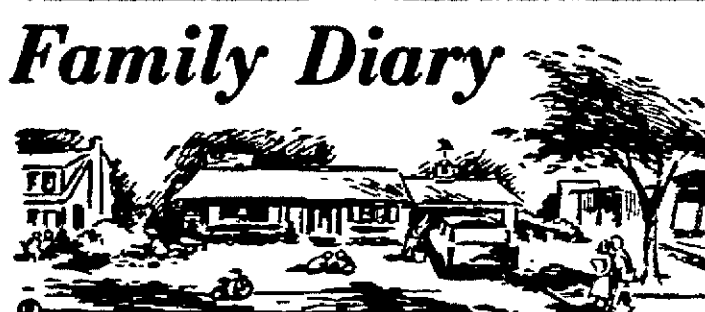

Even though North and South were vulnerable, East bid the hand in what is apparently a weak manner. Why? Well, East wanted to be declarer on the hand because his hand was magnificent offensively and, defensively, it was not so hot. East took a calculated risk with his 2-club overcall — hoping that someone would keep the bidding open. Don't forget, East had a real distributional freak and it figured that there were other freaks at the table (hands, I mean). The bidding progressed until North bid five diamonds and now East became worried. He thought that the opponents might make a slam with a club lead so he bid five hearts as a lead director. It is interesting that South was cold for a slam in diamonds with a club lead.

South felt that he had bid enough and doubled five hearts and when it got back to East, he "ran" to six clubs which also got doubled. South led the king of diamonds and East trumped and then drew two rounds of trumps, ending in dummy. The heart finesse was successfully taken and East conceded a spade loser to make the slam. Now, at their teammates table, the American pair, sitting North and South, bid six diamonds and they got a club lead. South played the hand very carefully to make the slam with an overtrick. Oh, yes, the Americans still lost by a mile in the match but not on this hand.

To have more fun at the bridge table, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the leaflet containing basic principles of Tomorrow's Bridge — Today. Address your request to William Seamon, in care of this newspaper.

Having heard the tales about him, I took strictly with a grain of salt Sally's story that she and Mr. Greenleaf were "friends" — John says if someone smiles at our youngest, he's a friend — and told her she'd better not cut across Mr. Greenleaf's grass on her way to school.

In any case, I'd never laid eyes on the old man. In fact, I hadn't heard his name mentioned for months until one morning a little over a week ago when Sally and I sat down to compile the guest list for her seventh birthday party.

Long Guest List

Although it had been agreed that this year she was to have a big party — last year then, forgetting the inefficiency of using sarcasm on ice cream and cake for six small children, I added, "Are little girls — I was a little you sure you haven't forgotten when at the end of ten someone?"

Promptly and with spirit,

Sally Invites 'Friend' To Birthday Party

By Jeannette Griffith

Sally shouted "Mr. Greenleaf!"

I couldn't help laughing; then Sally laughed and danced off into the back yard to make hollyhock dolls.

I bought the invitations at the variety store and mailed them the next day, cheered by the weatherman's forecast of "warm and continued fair." I hardly dared contemplate what I would do with 25 children in case of rain.

Happily, however, the day dawned fair. At 2 o'clock when the guests arrived wreathed in smiles and clutching their ribbon bedecked packages — which Sally relieved them of with unseemly alacrity — I herded them all out in the back yard where Libby was in charge of games. Sally, however, lingered in the living room.

Tears Appear

"The party can't begin yet," she said. "Mr. Greenleaf isn't here."

Though I was amused there was a touch of annoyance in my voice. "Run along and play with your friends, honey. Mr. Greenleaf isn't coming to your party—he wasn't invited."

"Yes, he was!" she cried. "I asked him!" Tears sparkled in her eyes.

Carries Balloons

I knelt down and held her close. "Old men don't come to little girl's parties even if they are invited. Because Mr. Greenleaf smiled at you..."

The doorknob interrupted. "There he is!" Sally cried, darting like a dragon-fly.

And he was. Leaning on the arm of a uniformed chauffeur, Mr. Greenleaf's withered irascible old face peered out from behind a veritable carnival of balloons. Of every color of the rainbow, they tuzed at the strings he held in a gnarled old hand.

First Invite

Joyously Sally embraced his legs.

"You didn't think I'd come," Mr. Greenleaf said. But the remark was directed not at Sally but to me. His eyes twinkled like an old rogue elephant's. "Miss the first birthday party I've been invited to in seventy years."

With a gruff "Wait!" to the chauffeur, Mr. Greenleaf, balloons and all, followed Sally to the back yard.

Chamber Supports Study of Airport

But Business Group Says Move Wise Only if Board Agrees to Join

The chamber of commerce board of directors yesterday recommended that the county board give serious consideration to a professional study of the county airport problem only if the county is willing to follow up the recommendations of the study.

The chamber board said it would be futile to sponsor a $10,000 study, if the county decided it would not improve it or seek another site. The chamber committee requested that the Hugh Fisher airport consulting firm be included in studying the proposal.

The recommendations will be sent to Mark Catlin, chairman of the county airport committee, by William Pifer, chairman of the chamber's airport committee.

Fisher Recommendations

Chamber officials acted on a recommendation made by Fisher at a citizens' aviation advisory committee a week ago. Fisher said then that until facts are gathered and evaluated, no one can say if the Outagamie county port can or should be expanded or a new location found.

He said that he could not take a private contract to investigate the airport situation, since the airport is public property.

In other business Friday the chamber board of directors voted to support the mayor's plan for a parking commission. It also asked that the city consider ramping the W. Washington street lots and the lots at N. Morrison and E. Washington streets.

Parking Meters

To make this plan financially feasible, the chamber said that the city would have to adopt a staggered system of charging parking fees. Lots farthest from College avenue would have the lowest rates; so-called premium parking space would have higher rates.

The chamber also requested that the city investigate permitting free parking in Jones park. Chamber officials said that they doubted whether the whole park should be turned over to parking and that a study would have to be made of the situation.

The city also was informed that the chamber would support a request for a public service commission hearing to return depot service to downtown Chicago and North Western depot. The action came on a request by Ald. Austin Tucker that the chamber support his proposal for a city protest to the railroad.

PSC Hearing

The chamber felt that an additional protest to the railroad simply would be acknowledged, then ignored, but that a request for a PSC hearing might have some effect. Arrangements were made for a meeting at 4 p.m., July 29 with Leroy Empey, district highway engineer, to discuss the routing of Highway 47 and other local highway problems. City and county representatives will be invited.

Patrick Coughlin, Appleton lawyer, was named chairman of the forum committee, replacing Edward M. Adam, who resigned.

Six Postal Employees Get Awards

Six Appleton Post Office employees have received awards for suggestions which will be used at the post office. Robert Drexler, a clerk, received $30 for his suggestion to lessen workspace congestion by adopting a different floor plan for equipment and sorting cases.

Awards of $15 went to Marvin Vandenberg, clerk, for a plan to label auxiliary cases for mail sorting during peak periods, and Alvin Schneider, for suggesting using a spray preservative for the chrome trim on postal trucks.

Certificates of commendation from Postmaster General Arthur Summerfield were awarded to Ralph Pleier and Jack Vermeern, clerks, and William Sommer, parcel post driver.

Fifteen per cent of Appleton postal employees took part in the suggestion program during the last year, compared to the national average of 10 per cent participation. Twenty-one suggestions were submitted.

Sarge Photos

Stunt Drivers Gave the Outagamie county fair grandstand audience a genuine thrill show Friday night, as the photographs above show. The lower photo shows one of the drivers as he pilots his speeding car in a leap from ramp to ramp. About 3,600 persons saw the show, although the afternoon performance was cut short by Seymour's scattered showers.

Skids End First Auto Show, Night Crowd Sees Thrill Act

The humidity was high and there was rain at the Outagamie County fair Friday afternoon, but it didn't dampen the enthusiasm of a fair-size crowd. The rain held off for a full-scale evening show and crowd.

Afternoon showers turned the fairgrounds track into a slick gumbo, cutting short the stunt drivers auto show. Their precision driving was impossible on a track which caused skids and spins every time drivers tried to get up a head of steam. The thrill show ended with rollovers by the drivers in old cars.

Announcing that the show couldn't go on because of conditions, the master of ceremonies said "we'll give you rollovers, as many as we can." But it was so slippery that the drivers couldn't get up enough speed to roll over the old cars more than once, and at one point didn't make a complete rollover.

Cover Faces For the half-filled grandstand, however, it seemed pretty good entertainment as teenage girls covered their faces on the first time a car hit the slanted ramp, hung in the air a minute and tumbled into the mushy track. Friday night the auto show

Find Damaged Coin Box in Trash Barrel

Police today had a tangible clue in the recent wave of pilfered and damaged coin boxes of automatic vending machines.

The clue is a damaged coin box found Friday afternoon in a trash barrel at the Mendel Zussman grocery, 1016 E. Pacific street.

Store employees, who reported the finding, said the coin box was not in the trash barrel late Thursday and must have been placed there overnight or sometime earlier on Friday.

Erastus Beadle's Early Dime novels dealt—however fancifully—with real folk heroes like Ned Buntline and Buffalo Bill. As competition brought gaudy colored covers and large type (a few are displayed above), the authors turned to fiction. Yet a great many boys have been reared in the fond delusion that Frank Merriwell, for instance, was some sort of flesh-and-blood hero in the dim football history of Yale.

Best of AMERICAN HERITAGE — The Dime Novel Era

BY MARY NOEL

"His sentence was finished in a ringing shriek, for Calamity had drawn a revolver and shot him, even while his sarcastic words left his lips, and he fell to the ground wounded through the breast. "So much for your lyn', you miserable whelp!" the girl cried, wrought suddenly to a high pitch of anger. "If I was dishonored once, by one such as you, no man's defiling touch has reached me since..."

"Now she dashed away through the narrow gulch, catching with delight long breaths of the perfume of flowers which met her nostrils at every onward leap of her horse, piercing the gloom of the night with her dark lovely eyes, searchingly, lest she should be surprised; lighting a cigar at full motion..."

Nick Carter slipped through a triple-bolted door and evaded a corps of masked ruffians. Frank Merriwell dashed about the world rescuing fair ladies in distress. Fred Fearnot kept busy for over 28 years, battling for the Boers and advising the German Kaiser. American youth by the millions gobbled up dime novel histories of such heroes, even if it took a magnifying glass to read the last pages. The dime novel era is described here by an author and teacher who has studied it especially.

would remain the same, no matter who the publisher might be, or how the format might vary. The capacity of the juvenile mind for this type of literature seemed infinite. One wonders if it would ever have gone out had it not been for the reluctance of modern advertisers to support publications aimed at a pocket-money audience. The dime novel successors have been the pulp magazines, with a slightly more adult appeal. The youngsters themselves have been placated with the movies, television, and the comics.

Lik the comics today, dime novels were attacked by the moralists — there was a scarcity of psychologists in those days. Anthony Comstock called the paperbacks "deviltraps for the young." As a precaution, the publishers required their writers to insert a discreet number of Sunday school platitudes that could be forked out to capricious critics upon occasion.

Moralists Protest

When some of the dime novel authors were diverted from "westerns" to city detective stories, all of the moralists were up in arms. They now felt that a villain who pursued his women down rocky gorges or roasted his captive millionaire over a slow fire in the wide open air was a healthier sort than the villain whose activities were confined to windowless dance-hall chambers and dank, fetid, underground vaults.

Criminals in the detective stories were always provided with a variety of improvised prisons — ranging from iron cells in the holds of ships to scientifically constructed torture chambers deep underground. Nevertheless, there was always a way out, especially for an inventive operative like Nick Carter.

He was capable of making his escape past 13 masked ruffians and one "radiant creature" named Elmora who carried a jeweled stiletto, through a succession of triply bolted doors separated by long passages underground, up an elevator which was guarded by a man leaning over the open hatchway with his finger on the rifle trigger, and out into the dark and vacant street. Nick then

'Rides 'em Down'

Attracted by the glowing panatela, four desperadoes leap from ambush, Colts flashing, but this vintage cover girl simply rides them down, amid "howls of pain and rage, and curses too vile to repeat here," and gallops off unscathed, whooping like a Comanche.

Here, in capsule form, we have the prototype of the classic dime novel scene, with a fair sampling of its normal ingredients — action and sudden death, virtue preserved and ambush outwitted, rough talk and high-flown writing.

During the half century of the popularity of the dime novel, from 1860 to about 1910, millions of boys; vigorous parental opposition notwithstanding, luxuriated in this imaginative world. They took their reading straight, without benefit of "comics," and in the closest, dimmest, smallest possible print — although even this could be reduced in size if, at the end of the yarn, the cascade of words outran the space, so that the final episodes might well be visible only to those equipped with magnifying glasses. The only visual lure was the cover picture.

The problem of the age, apparently, was not why Johnny couldn't read, but how to stop him.

Lusty Villains

No psychological or sociological fog obscured the reader's plain vision of a villain who was not in the least a victim of social injustice, of hereditary mental disturbance, or even of emotional conflicts and confused motives. He was a fine, lusty villain who "gazed into her white lovely face with a thrill of fiendish triumph." Nor was the villain, as long as the hope of life remained, ever inhibited by remorse. Only upon his deathbed did he make that confession which was so necessary to the happiness or reputation of the hero.

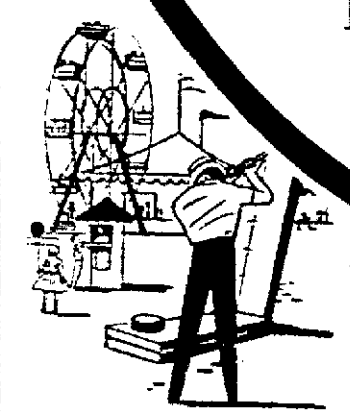

Against villains like these, even a dime novel hero required the aid of coincidence. Coincidences came with arms as long as lariat, and as supple; the authors gloried in them. It was a world of multiple aliases, populated with thousands of long-lost husbands, brothers, sisters, children and sweethearts, all falling into each other's astounded arms just after the villains, finally exposed, breathed their last. When the forged letters were straightened out, the identifying birthmarks revealed, and the false beards removed from the true English lords and eastern millionaires, one needed only to wait for those suffering from drugs-that-simulate-death to wake up, and it was time for wedding bells.

'Be My Wife'

"Florence!" cries one hero to his heroine after all the reintroductions are complete. "You know me as I am — you know how red my hands are dyed with human blood. And yet I come to you to ask you if you will be my wife?"

"Yes," she replied, "and in my love you shall forget the embittered past."

Of this type of story Beadle alone sold over 2,500,000 in the first three years of his business — in the years when a sale of 20,000 made a novel a best seller. Beadle's success meant that for 50 years the essential plot elements of the dime novel

Bergstrom Firm Notes 3 Months Earnings Spurt

Increase More Than Offset Decline in First Quarter

Neenah — A second quarter spurt in earnings has more than offset a temporary earnings decline for the first quarter at Bergstrom Paper company, N. H. Bergstrom, president, reported today to stockholders.

First quarter earnings were 41 cents a share, comparing unfavorably with the 49 cents a share, earned in the first quarter of 1958 with no change in the number of shares outstanding, he reported.

Second quarter earnings more than made up for that temporary decline, Bergstrom commented. They were 66 cents a share as against 47 cents per share for the second corresponding quarter last year.

Earnings for the first six months thus were $1.07 a share, an improvement of 11 per cent over the first six months of 1958.

"Better Scheduling"

"Virtually all of this improvement in earnings is attributable to additional business and improved scheduling. The increased volume of business made longer runs possible on the machines, enabling us to achieve greater operating efficiency and economy," he declared.

Improved earnings at this point in no way reflect any benefit from price increases announced in February since this effect will not show up in earnings statements until after July 1. It also must be remembered that this effect will be somewhat offset by recent advances in raw material costs. The overall outlook for the balance of 1959 was pronounced as good by the company president.

The new warehouse at its Highway 41 plant is progressing on schedule and will provide 40,000 square feet of additional storage space. It is expected to be ready for use in early September, Bergstrom indicated.

Net sales for the first six months of this year came to $8,051,151 as compared with $5,431,196 for the same period last year. Net earnings after deduction for federal and state income taxes amounted to $397,049 this year and $356,355 for the same period last year.

2 Winneconne Men Enter Old Car Tour

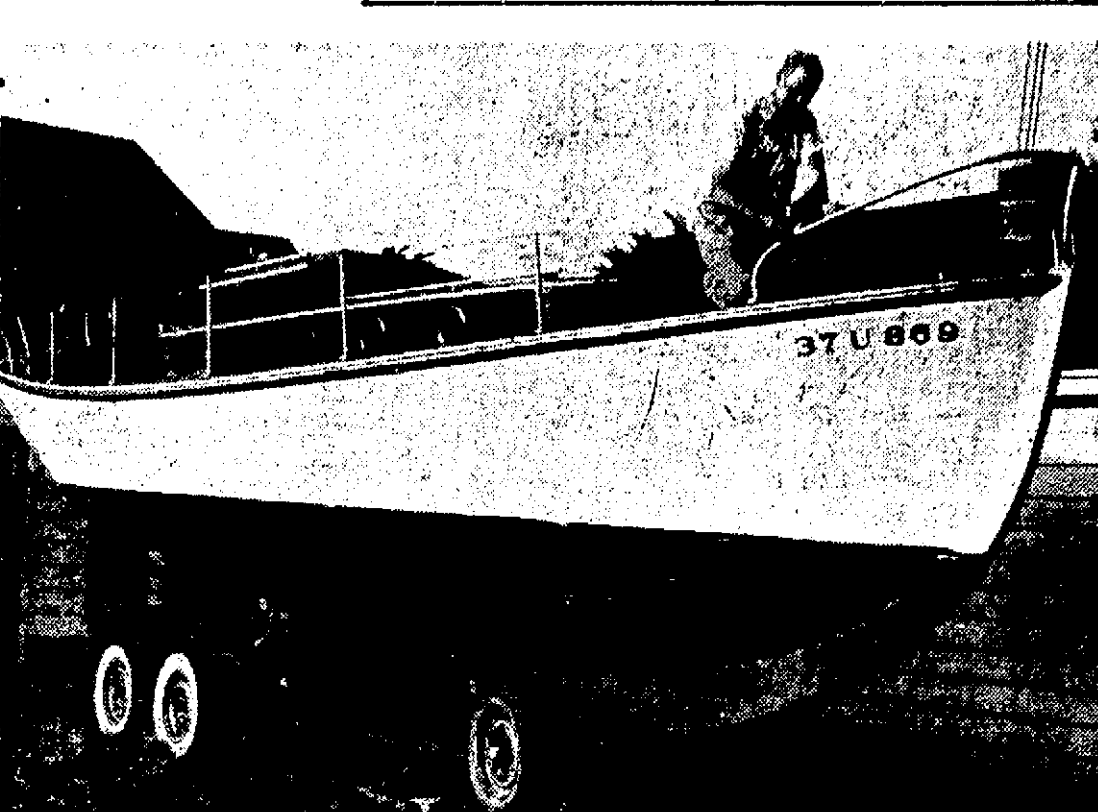

Winneconne — Winneconne residents participating in the Horseless Carriage club tour from Green Bay to Madison today and Sunday are Wilber Schlaack, driving a 1928 Chevrolet, and Gene Giddings, driving a 1913 Model T Ford.

Over 2,000 swimmers were counted during the fourth week of supervised beach activity, Lyle Mueller, recreation director, reported. The second teenage dance was held Friday evening.

Guests at the home of Mrs. Josie Krings were William Schlingman and Miss Maxine Schlingman, Milwaukee. Miss Schlingman is head of the drama department at Albertus Magnus college, New Haven, Conn.

The Pleasure club held its annual summer outing Tuesday at the Hiawatha room. Prize winners were Mrs. Edward Abendroth, Mrs. Ralph Nickle, Mrs. Clarence Nimmer and Mrs. Ruby Fondel.

This 31-Foot Yawl, Built by David C. Thomas, Neenah engineer, was launched today at Oshkosh after being parked four years in his back yard. The craft's keel will be weighted with lead to balance the two masts, one 33 feet high, the other 22 feet.

Four Years Abuilding 31-Foot Yawl, Built by Neenah Man, Launched at Oshkosh Dock

BY JOHN MORGAN Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Neenah — Four years abuilding, Linda Lee II, 31-foot ocean-going yawl, was launched today at Oshkosh. The yawl, sometimes called "The Salt Mine" by its builder, David C. Thomas of 108 State street, will undergo ballast tests until fall, when it is taken out of the water.

Two masts will be stepped into deck fittings while the craft is in the Neenah bay. After the seven-ton boat was placed in the water by a large marine crane at Oshkosh, Thomas sailed the craft up to Neenah on its 24-horsepower auxiliary engine.

To Add Lead

Before he can pleasure sail the craft, however, Thomas will need to make water tests of the craft's balance with sails raised. The hollow box keel awaits up to a ton of lead, added in 25-pound cylinders. Until the craft under sail is balanced, Thomas keeps adding lead to balance the force of wind tending to push it down.

When balanced, the wind, instead of depressing the masts, will push the boat forward.

This winter's work on the new craft will include melting the lead and shaping it into a permanent keel.

It is 31 feet long, has a 10 1/2 foot beam and draws about 4 1/2 feet of water. The top of the mahogany cabin is about 5 feet above the water line.

The main mast, stepped at the fore end of the cabin, is 33 feet high and swings a 17 1/2-foot boom. The mizzenmast, stepped on the afterdeck behind the spoked white oak helm, stands 22 feet and swings a 10-foot boom.

"Yawl Rig Safest"

Thomas, plant engineer for Hardwood Products corporation, converted the boat's design from a schooner rig, one with two tall masts. "The yawl rig," he said, "is the safest because in a hard blow, only a small amount of sail can be carried." In strong wind, the jib and mizzen sail alone would sail the boat safely. The mainsail in a high wind could capsize the craft. The boat's hull is entirely

Doe Runs Through Menasha's Fringe

Menasha — A doe ran through the northeast part of Menasha Friday afternoon but escaped the city after a short visit.

Residents in the 700 block of State street helped the animal when it became caught in a back yard fence.

One report said the doe went north from that location. Others reported seeing it go south from the 700 block on Lincoln street to about Fourth and DePere streets, where it turned eastward to leave the city at the east edge.

boat again? Would he advise anyone else to try building such a large craft? His answer is "No. It's too big a project."

Although he sometimes calls his yawl a "salt mine," Mrs. Thomas said the craft has been a dream of his for about 30 years.

Use Century-Old Method In Curing Kentucky Ham

Louisville, Ky. — The century-old method of curing Kentucky ham is still used today, says Ellis Henry. "They either love it or they can't stand it. There doesn't seem to be a middle ground."

Cures 4,000 a Year — Henry's words on Kentucky hams usually are accepted as gospel. He and his helpers cure about 4,000 a year at his home at nearby Pewee valley and at his wife's family's farm about 50 miles northeast of here.

There's no secret about the procedure in curing Kentucky hams. The technique used is centuries old. But there is an art to using the procedure which only experience can give.

Henry says. Henry has refined his curing methods somewhat since he started curing hams in 1937. When he started, the hams were cured with salt. Now a mixture of salt, sugar and pepper is used.

Of course, the first step in getting a good cured ham is having a good green ham. Prefers Corn-Fed Hogs — "A prime corn-fed hog is the secret to a good ham," Henry says. "Virginia hams come from peanut-fed hogs, but even those are finished on corn."

At the risk of starting an inter-state war, Henry claims that Kentucky hams are better than Virginia hams. "The hams from those peanut-fed hogs seem to me to be stringier and oilier than those from corn-fed hogs," he says.

The green ham is hand-rubbed with the curing mixture. Then it's packed down in mixture for 25 to 35 days depending on the weather. Knowing when the hams are ready for smoking is a true art. John Hinkle, the meat-curing foreman says, "One day I look at them and say to myself, 'They're done.' You don't get that out of the ham, you get it out of your head."

After the ham is washed with cold water to remove the excess salt, it is smoked with green hickory wood. Then it is wrapped in heavy paper, tied into a cotton sack and hung up to cure.

Hangs All Summer — The ham hangs all summer and into the fall until the first frost. At that time, it's ready to eat.

There's a certain way to cook Kentucky hams, too.

For baked ham the best way, according to Mrs. Henry, is to scrub the ham and then soak it in cold water overnight. After that it's simmered 25 minutes for each pound. The skin is removed and the ham is decorated and baked for about 45 minutes. Then it's eaten cold, preferably with beaten biscuits.

Other ham connoisseurs insist on fried country ham. Slices not more than a quarter of an inch thick are fried in a heavy iron skillet for about five minutes.

Gravy Advice — The excess grease is poured off and water is poured into the skillet to produce the famous red gravy. Persons not afraid of calories use heavy cream instead of water.

Although Henry cures more Kentucky hams than anyone else in Kentucky, it is not his vocation. He's an industrial relations executive with a Louisville distillery.

"This is all part of my retirement plan," he says.

Big Righthander Evens Record With 3-Hitter in Rain-Shortened Game; Vila Drives in Winning Run

Cedar Rapids, Ia. — The hot Fox Cities Foxes Friday night resumed right where they left off just before the break for the Three-I League All-Star game, defeating Cedar Rapids, 3-1, in a rain-shortened game.
Big righthander Earl Furlow set down the Braves on just three hits over the game's 5-inning route. Furlow, who evened his record at 2-2 since being sent down by Charlotte several weeks ago, struck out five and didn't walk any.

The victory in the opener of a weekend series moved the Foxes into third place, just 12 games back of loop-leading Green Bay. Cedar Rapids dropped into a 2-way tie for fourth.
Return Monday
The Foxes return home for a 6-day Goodland field stand Monday after playing tonight and Sunday here.
The victory was the fifth in their last seven starts for the Foxes.
Tonight, the Foxes' ace, Bert Guenther (7-7) will probably get the starting call against Cedar Rapids' Don MacLeod (8-0).
Hernan Vila drove in two vital runs with a single in the fifth Friday to boost his season RBI total to 45.
Interference Call
Sinquefeld, leading off in the fifth reached first on an interference call against the Cedar Rapids catcher, Furlow popped out, attempting to bunt.
Jake Wood and "Zorro" Versalles singled to load the bases. Then, Vila singled to right to score two runs as Wood barely beat the throw home.
Versalles scored on Weather's error.

Bruce Fossum Leaves West For MSU

Successful Prep Coach to Assist Fordy Anderson

By LEE REMMEL
Post-Crescent News Service
Green Bay — Perfectionist Bruce Fossum, the dedicated Scandinavian who engineered a basketball renaissance at West High school, is leaving his Wildcats.
Fossum, head coach at West the last six years, has resigned to become assistant basketball coach at Michigan State university. His appointment by Athletic Director Clarence (Biggie) Alunn was approved Friday by the university's board of regents at East Lansing, Mich.
At MSU, Fossum will assist the famed Fordy Anderson, who escorted the Spartans to the Big Ten conference championship last season and into the semi-finals of the NCAA tournament.
Bruce, who in 1956 produced West's first Fox River Valley conference championship in nearly 20 years and last season maneuvered the Wildcats into the state tournament for the first time in the school's history, also will be united with his No. 1 protege, Lance Olson, at East Lansing.
Olson West's erstwhile "Big Cat," will be returning as a senior for his third year of varsity competition with the Spartans.
Discussing his upcoming assignment, Bruce admitted, "It's what I want to do," pointing out, "It looks like a great opportunity—all of Anderson's past assistants have become head coaches at other colleges or universities. It's most recent, Bob Stevens, is now head coach at South Carolina university."
"Naturally, Mary (Mrs. Fossum, the former Mary McMillin) and I hate to leave Green Bay. Everyone has been so good to us—it's a terrific town—but we just could not pass up this opportunity."
Fossum came to West in the

Packers Get Fancy New Uniforms

Green Bay — P— No matter how they play this fall, the Green Bay Packers of the National Football league may be described in one word: resplendent.
Here's the new official uniform Packers will be wearing when they trot onto the field at home games — myrtle green (dark green to most of us) jerseys with white letters and gold and white stripes on the arm; pants of shimmering gold with green and white stripes; socks to match the jerseys, with gold and white stripes and helmets of gold.
For games away from home, white socks and jerseys will be substituted for the green.
In the past, the Packers have played in dark green or dark blue shirts with light tan pants.
The first hit by the Yankees, still fourth 64 games behind, came when first base umpire Ed Rommel called Terry safe in the sixth after a 1-bounce throw by Aparicio.

The Milwaukee Braves have been having their troubles of late and Friday evening was no exception. Here Warren Spahn (21) gets ready to leave the mound. Manager Fred Haney, center, holds the ball before turning it over to relief pitcher Don McMahon (not shown) in the eighth inning of Friday night's 4-3 loss to the Cardinals. Also in the group is catcher Del Crandall.

Cards Deal Spahn 10th Defeat, 4-3

Braves Skid to 3 Games Behind, Biggest Deficit in Two Years

By The Associated Press
Joey Jay lost one, then Carl Willey, then Lew Burdette. Now Warren Spahn. That's how the Milwaukee Braves, favored for pitching, have lost four in a row for the first time this season and have skidded to third, three games behind in the National league race—their largest deficit in two years.
Not since July 10, 1957, have the Braves been that far off the pennant race. Then they were second to St. Louis, finally overhauling the Cards before striking out Lindy McDaniel.
The Cards scored in the fourth-place Pittsburgh Pirates and only three ahead of the Cubs, second division leaders.
From the fourth through the seventh, Spahn faced only 14 batters—two over regulation—and had retired seven in a row before Ken Boyer singled with two out in the eighth. Boyer scored on a double by Joe Cunningham who went home with the deciding run on rookie Gene Oliver's single. After Spahn walked Hal Smith, Spahn walked Alex Garammas to fill the bases and running off with their first title.
Friday night it was a sixth-place St. Louis, usually a soft touch for Spahn, that beat the southpaw ace with a 2-out rally in the eighth inning for a 4-3 victory.
Sixth Defeat
It was Milwaukee's sixth defeat in 8 games.
Spahn, after a now typical unsteady start, was rolling along as complete master of the Cards when they landed on him for two runs in the eighth and drove him from the mound. It was the tenth defeat for the ace left-hander who was seeking his fifty-fourth career victory over St. Louis.
Instead, he became a Cardinal conquest for only the thirty-first time of his career. Spahn has 11 victories for the season.
The results put the Braves only a game ahead of the who had made a fine back-hand stop.

Cleveland, after losing three straight, came off a winner when reliever Gary Bell ended a second 3-run Boston rally by putting a called third strike past Bobby Avila for the final out with the tying and lead runs on base. That saved rookie Larry Locke's first victory after he was chased by Marty Keough's 1-on homer in a 3-run seventh.

"Rocky" Colavito hit his twenty-ninth homer for the Indians, who lost manager Joe Gordon and left fielder "Minnie" Minoso in rhabarbs.

Brooks Robinson's first homer and a 2-run error by "Rocky" Bridges with the bases loaded on walks gave the Orioles their three runs with two out in the second inning. Don Mossi (7-4) lost it, although allowing only three hits. Hec Brown (6-5) won it.

The A's broke a 3-3 tie at Washington with four runs in the seventh on Dick Williams' single and Harry Chitt's double. Ned Garver (7-9) was the winner, with Russ Kemmerer (5-10) taking the loss.

Gene Littler Owns Big Lead at Halfway Mark

Wethersfield, Conn. — It's easy to figure why Gene Littler, the dandy pro from Singing Hills, Calif., holds a commanding lead today at the halfway mark in the $25,000 Insurance City Open Golf tournament.

Littler has scored rounds of 64-66-130 for 36 holes, a blistering pace, over the par 71 Wethersfield Country club's 6,548 - yard course.

His brilliant putting and pinpointed drives have shot him five strokes ahead of his nearest challengers, Bruce Crampton of Sydney, Australia, and Bob Goalby of Crystal River, Fla.

Teenagers Sparkle Carin Cone, Sylvia Ruuska Set World Records in AAU Swim Meet

Redding, Calif. — Teenagers continued to dominate the National AAU Women's Swimming championships today after a pair of them raced to world records in the 220-yard backstroke and 440-yard medley.

Record breakers were 19-year-old Carin Cone and blond Sylvia Ruuska.

Shapely Carin beat defending champion Chris Von Saltza in the backstroke and went the distance in 2 minutes 27.9 seconds to erase the world mark of 2:38.5 by L. De Nijs of Holland in 1957.

Then came 17-year-old Sylvia and the greatest performance ever in the 440-yard medley in which the racers swam one lap each of breaststroke, backstroke, butterfly and freestyle.

Miss Ruuska, a senior at Berkeley High school, went the distance in 5 minutes 40.2 seconds. The International Swimming Federation last year in setting up the event meter springboard diving, for world competition had set 110-yard butterfly, 440 - yard freestyle, 110-yard breaststroke, and 440-yard freestyle relay.

Final Conditioner

Miss Cone, from Ridge-wood, N.J., and swimming for the Houston Shamrocks since she's a sophomore at the University of Houston, was swimming the 220 as a final long race conditioner for the 100-meter backstroke in Chicago — The 52nd annual Chicago to Mackinac island race gets underway today with last year's winners favored to repeat.

Sabre, a big 87-foot A-Class yawl owned by Roman Brotz of Sheboygan, Wis., should finish first in 333-mile race.

However, under the handicap system, Sabre must concede Dyna six hours and Rangoon 144 hours.

Longest Lead Giants Slap Pirates Behind Sam Jones, 4-1

Tournament Brass Considering Action Against Olmedo

Will Meet Sunday; Suspension Of Wimbledon Champ Unlikely

By Charles Chamberlain
Chicago — The tournament brass of amateur tennis will decide what action, if any, it should recommend he take against U.S. Davis cup star and Wimbledon champion, Alex Olmedo.

They could recommend a reprimand or even go so far inning on Don Blasingame's triple and Bill White's double. In the third Gino Cimoli was safe when Spahn missed tagging first base. A single by White and a fly by Cunningham sent Cimoli home.

Scores in 2nd

Milwaukee scored its first run in the second with the help of two errors. Johnny O'Brien's roller was picked up by Card starter Larry Jackson who threw past first, allowing the Milwaukee second baseman to go to third. When Blasingame fumbled Spahn's roller, O'Brien scored.

Two runs crossed in the third as Eddie Mathews led off with a triple and Hank Aaron and Torre doubled.

Jackson left after seven innings and McDaniel, who fanned four in the last two innings, took the victory, his eighth against 10 losses.

Bob Rush (4-3) faces Dick Ricketts (1-4) tonight.

Fossum Leaving West for MSU Job

fall of 1953 and within three years produced a conference champion — the first for the Wildcats since 1938 — and the feat earned him "coach of the year" honors.

Last March, the rangy University of Wisconsin alumnus steered a young team, regarded as a year away, over the rocky tournament trail to Madison.

Though the Wildcats lost their first state capital assignment, it was the big payoff for Fossum, climaxing a building program he launched in the public grade schools the year he came here.

A Bright Heritage
"It's only the beginning too," he promised. "We'll be down there consistently from now on." And, with performers like Don (Moose) Hendrickson, Al Esther, Keith West and Clyde Trudeau returning, chances for a 1960 return appear bright. Certainly, he has left a bright heritage for his successor.

Over his 6-year term, the canny defensive specialist compiled a 74-55 won and lost record, eminently respectable in a conference as highly competitive as the Fox River Valley — and the brightest at West.

In '58, the 'Cats finishing strong to fashion a 13-7 mark and, storming back from early adversity, Fossum's young tigers arrived ahead of schedule, finishing with a 14 - 11 reading with the aid of that sweep through the West Regional and Stevens Point Sectional.

Success, a glance at the personal history reveals, always has been a Fossum characteristic. He played three years of varsity basketball at the University of Wisconsin from 1946 through 1949 and was a member of the school's last Big Ten conference championships as a sophomore in 1947, the year the Badgers featured Bobby Cook and Don Rehfeldt.

Before that, he lettered in football, basketball and track at Ashland High school, where he was an all - conference choice in both football and basketball the last two years and an all-state cage choice as a senior. He also played pro basketball with the Sheboygan Redskins and Fond du Lac Rangers while coaching at West Bend.

Woodenware Tops Neenah Paper 20-15

Keith Lambie Hits Two Homers For Marathon 9

Neenah — Marathon Ramblers and Menasha Woodenware copped victories in the make-up game Friday night in the Twin City Industrial Softball league at the Neenah Recreation field.

The Ramblers posted a 5-1 win over Gilbert Paper and Wooden Ware won a 20-15 slugfest from the Neenah Paper squad.

3 Homers Hit

Keith Lambie accounted for four of the five Rambler runs on homers. He clouted a solo blast in the first inning and then laced out a three run blow in the second. Bud Geibel slapped another circuit drive in the second for the winners. This gave the Ramblers a 5-0 lead and they were blanked the rest of the way.

Gilbert's lone run came in the third after two consecutive hits.

Doug Wiatrowski was the winning hurler for the Ramblers and he gave up six hits while walking four. Loser was George Bonrack who gave up eight hits and did not walk a batter.

Both Wooden Ware and Neenah Paper had 14 base hits but the Wooden Ware squad

Neither Men or Broncs Stay With Rodeo Long

Show to Open in Manawa Today Will Feature Parade, Contests, Events

Manawa — Rodeo cowboys and the bronses they ride have something in common—neither stay with the same outfit very long.

The stallions are continually changed as they become tame—the riders and rodeo personnel are continually moving.

This weekend the first genuine rodeo ever held in central Wisconsin will open in Manawa.

The stock for the show is supplied by Bob Barnes of Iowa. Directing arena activities is Chuck Dent of Florida. Frank Currie from Oklahoma is the clown and Dittman Mitchell, the announcer.

Like the cowboys who ride the circuit of many rodeos, even the announcer and clowns work at different shows. Mitchell is back again with the rodeo after working in Iowa and Missouri with another outfit.

The cowboys themselves come from all states and free lance their way. A good cowboy can earn from $7,000 to $30,000 in a single year, while the top cowboy earned about $130,000 last year.

They spend their time jockeying back and forth between the 650 rodeos held in about 39 states, most during the summer.

$1,000 Prize

They will be seeking the $1,000 prize money put up by the Manawa Lions this weekend. In addition, they will compete for $20 entry fees paid by each rider.

Things at Manawa are shaping up with about three-fourths of the horses, cattle and bulls on the scene. Cowboys, tanned and sporting 10-gallon hats and boots, are common on the city streets.

A rundown of weekend activities includes a parade at 10 a.m. Saturday, the queen judging contest at 1 p.m. and rodeo at 2 p.m. A western dance follows that evening. Sunday will feature a second round of rodeo competition at 2 p.m. preceded by another parade into the grounds.

Oshkosh — County Judge

Herbert J. Mueller Friday gave the defense attorney another week to file a reply brief in the case of Dominic Fogini, 42, no permanent address, charged with shoplifting.

Further proceedings will be at 1:30 p.m. Friday, July 24, when the judge also will decide whether to reduce Fogini's bond from the present $10,000. In lieu of the bond, Fogini is being held in jail.

The man, believed from Chicago, is charged with stealing eight suits from Spoo and Sons, Oshkosh men's clothing store, on May 28.

Menasha Craft Show, Contest Set for Aug. 5

Menasha—An all-city craft show and contest will be at the Memorial building from 2-5 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 5.

Craft project entries, says Mrs. Patricia Koeneman of the Menasha park and recreation department, should be left for display no later than Aug. 3. Each entry must bear the name, address, age and telephone number of the contestant.

Mrs. Charles Steingraber and Mrs. Gordon Altenhofen will assist with judging.

Trophies will be awarded in three age groups — 6-8, 9-11 and 12 and older.

Projects must be done entirely by the person entering, under supervision of playground leaders, or during Mrs. Koeneman's crafts classes.

Judging will be based on originality, neatness and workmanship. Winning projects will be displayed in the window of a downtown business establishment.

Shoplifting Case Deferred for Week

Oshkosh — County Judge Herbert J. Mueller Friday gave the defense attorney another week to file a reply brief in the case of Dominic Fogini, 42, no permanent address, charged with shoplifting.

Further proceedings will be at 1:30 p.m. Friday, July 24, when the judge also will decide whether to reduce Fogini's bond from the present $10,000. In lieu of the bond, Fogini is being held in jail.

The man, believed from Chicago, is charged with stealing eight suits from Spoo and Sons, Oshkosh men's clothing store, on May 28.

Fire Causes Damage at Stebane Firm

Forest Junction — Fire of undetermined origin caused extensive damage to the Stebane company and threatened two adjacent houses about 10 p.m. Friday.

Firemen from Forest Junction and Brillion fought the blaze for about three hours.

Reuben Stebane, one of the owners, said he could not estimate the damage. The fire apparently started in a corner of the firm's office.

He said he left the building shortly after 9 p.m. with an employee. Robert Keller, a Forest Junction youth who was passing the building on his bicycle, reported the fire about 10:20 p.m.

Stebane said the office safe and company records were removed from the burning building.

Otto Schley and Mrs. Huldene Knocspel, residents of the homes on either side of the building, started moving out until it was apparent the fire would be brought under control.

Warning System Test Scheduled for Monday

There will be a national air warning alarm system test scheduled for Monday.

Exercise between state warning points and secondary points Monday. The Appleton police department receives the warning, then transmits it to eight neighboring counties.

Outagamie county is the fifth to be notified by the police, and County Civil Defense Coordinator Andrew J. Schiltz notifies CD directors at Kimberly, Little Chute, Kaukauna, Seymour, Combined Locks and Hortonville.

Officials Trying to Link 3 State Murders

Stevens Point — A meeting to exchange information on three Wisconsin murders attracted law enforcement officials Friday from Portage, Chippewa and Barron counties and representatives of the state crime laboratory.

After the session officials refused to say whether any progress had been made.

The officers are seeking a possible link between the slaying of Mrs. Agnes Mrozuk, 58, in her Stevens point store last weekend; Mrs. Byron A. Marshall, 51, in her Marsh Miller Lake home near Bloomer last April, and Louis Louise Welk, 50, in her home at Rice Lake in June of 1956.

Green Bay Cheese

Green Bay — Trading was quiet on the Wisconsin Cheese Exchange Friday and cheese values were unchanged. Original bids placed early in the session remained unfilled at the close.

No sales or offers. Unfilled miles an hour on Main street at 12:15 this morning.

Robin R. Ziegler, 51, route 2, Neenah, forfeited $9.20 for failing to stop for the railroad crossing signal at the Soo Line tracks on Main street at 9:07 p.m. Tuesday.

Ancient Cars Start Trip To Madison

Green Bay — Twelve automobiles, most of them at least 30 years old, started from the courthouse here this morning on a day-and-a-half trip to Madison.

The owners are members of the Wisconsin region of the Horseless Carriage club.

The trip is in commemoration of the first road race in the United States, one held between Green Bay and Oshkosh in 1878.

A few cars dropped out because of the weather. The cars left at 9:45, 15 minutes late, in a light rain. Most of the cars carried with them batteries, extra magnetos, tires, and jacks.

Among the entries were a 1916 model T Ford touring car, a 1922 Packard, a 1913 model T Ford, a 1916 Overland touring car, and a 1911 Ford touring car.

The drivers expected to whiz along at about 30 miles an hour through De Pere, Kaukauna, Appleton, Neenah, Menasha, Oshkosh (for lunch and repairs) Waupun, and Beaver Dam, where they will stay overnight.

They expected to reach Madison by Sunday noon.

About 10 others cars were expected to join the caravan en route to Madison.

The cars were expected to pass through Appleton about 11 a.m.

SO THE PEOPLE MAY KNOW...

What prompts an out-of-state circus to play the home town of another circus on the same day that Circus has scheduled? WHY would an unknown circus that has never played this area invade Appleton on the day scheduled by Appleton and Wisconsin's own Adams Bros. and Seils Bros. Combined Circus?

We of Adams & Seils Bros. do not know what prompts this invasion. We are not aware of what type of business ethics dictate such a move. We do know that we have planned since last year to give the children of Appleton a chance to see a fine, clean Circus on Tuesday, July 21. We will absolutely show two full and complete performances next Tuesday at Wisconsin Avenue and Ballard Road Under the Big Top. Any false announcement to the contrary may be put down to the competitive maneuvers which they expose themselves to be practicing.

We of Adams & Seils Bros. do not claim to be the "World's Largest" circus. Such a claim is easily made and difficult to disprove; but we do not care to attempt to deceive even one person as to our size. The only claim we make is one that is proven again by every audience that sees the Circus . . . that is why we advertise and firmly believe that we have not the largest, but the world's FINEST family circus . . . It's a full hour and one half show presented in three rings under a beautiful new blue and white Big top . . . good, clean entertainment for the whole family. And the big reason we call it a family circus is that every family can afford to come and see it. Other shows may invade your home town and expect you to believe that the inflated prices they ask are justified by the size of the show, but we guarantee dollar for dollar that the Adams Bros. and Seils Bros. Combined Circus . . . at Wisconsin Avenue and Ballard Road on Tuesday is the show for your money. Other shows, in addition to exorbitant admission prices may require that you spend many times the advertised price in order to obtain a seat where you can see the performance; but Adams Bros. and Seils Bros. Combined Circus guarantees that you can see the full and complete performance for the low price of 90c for Adults, 60c for children, with absolutely No Reserved Seats, Positively No Extra Charges . . . sit anyplace, pay no more.

We of Adams & Seils Bros., out of the immense amount of money spent annually to put a major circus on the road, spent over $30,000 in Appleton this past winter. The money spent with us does not go out of town . . . it stays right here to provide jobs for Appleton people.

We of Adams & Seils Bros. personally invite every man, woman and child in the area to spend the Happiest Holiday of the Year this Tuesday, it's Adams Bros. & Seils Bros. Combined 3 Ring Circus Day in Appleton at the old circus grounds, Wisconsin Avenue and Ballard Road. Why Pay More elsewhere when there has never been so much to see and never has it cost so little to see it . . . at the show for your money, Appleton and Wisconsin's own great circus, the last of the Big Tops from Wisconsin, Adams Bros. and Seils Bros. Combined, Wisconsin Avenue and Ballard Road on Tuesday.
